REVEREND SAMUEL KNOX WILSON, S. J.

President of Loyola University

FATHER WILSON

PRESIDENT OF LOYOLA UNIVERSITY,
AN EDUCATOR OF WIDE RENOWN.

FROM DREAM TO REALITY is the unspoken sentiment of both Father Wilson and Father Mertz as they compare the model of the chapel with what has already been completed.

With a keen eye of the rapidly changing world and with the Christian principles guiding Jesuit education fixed firmly in mind, the Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson, S.J., president, skillfully directs the course of Loyola University.

Having received his Ph.D. degree in history at Cambridge University, Father Wilson is the author of a widely used textbook on American history and a competent authority on present-day affairs. One of the most prominent and influential educators in the United States, he was re-elected secretary of the College and University Department of the National Catholic Educational Association and a member of the National Executive Board of that organization. He is also a member of several other of its committees and Editor of its newspaper, THE COLLEGE NEWS-LETTER, which is issued quarterly to Catholic colleges and universities.

Chief among the several advancements made at Loyola since Father Wilson became President in 1933 is the inauguration of the honors system, a development for which he received nation-wide recognition. For his many services to Loyola, for the remarkable progress Loyola has made under his leadership, and for his outstanding career as a nationally known and respected educator, Father Wilson is a President of whom we may feel justly proud.

THE NEWEST BUILDING in the University is right outside Father Wilson's office. He frequently inspects the progress of the construction of the chapel.

AN UNTIRING WORKER, Father Wilson remains at his desk until late every day seeing that all those details of the University requiring his attention are properly disposed of.

AS PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY, Father Wilson presides at all Convocations. As one interested in true education, he cannot but feel proud of these products of Jesuit teaching.

ADMINISTRATIVE

STUYVESANT PEABODY is chairman of the Administrative Council.

EDWARD J. FARRELL is the legal adviser of the Administrative Council.

To direct the affairs of any large university requires a knowledge of business as well as of education. Recognizing the fact that men in religious orders oftentimes have not had the necessary training for the successful management of finances, Loyola's administrators in 1930 organized a small group of experienced, outstanding Chicago business men who were both able and willing to give sound advice to aid in the solution of Loyola's business problems. Thus was begun the Administrative Council, a body which has time and again proved itself indispensable to the university.

The Administrative Council is composed of a general chairman, a legal adviser, and three committees of three members each. These eleven men have unselfishly and unsparingly given of their time and counsel to Loyola. They are men who, having achieved great success in the business world, have not forgotten that period of training through which all men must pass, but rather, mindful of the Catholic traditions in education, they are freely aiding the furthering of those traditions by giving to Loyola that which is most dear to them, their own time and service. And to them Loyola owes a real debt of gratitude.

The three committees are finance, public relations, and buildings and grounds. The whole council meets only once annually, but committee meetings are called more frequently, and the advice of individual members is sought whenever needed by the administrators of the University.

General chairman of the council is Mr. Stuyvesant Peabody, of the Peabody Coal Company. Mr. Edward J. Farrell, of Brewer and Farrell, leading Chicago attorneys, is legal adviser.

Necessarily the most active of the three committees during the past several years has been the Finance Committee, of which Mr. Samuel Insull Jr., of the W. A. Alexander Company, is chairman. He is assisted by Mr. Charles F. Clarke, of Halsey, Stuart and Company, and by Mr. Matthew J. Hickey, President of Hickey and Company.

The Committee on Public Relations shapes the advertising and publicity policies of the University. Its chairman is Mr. Edward J. Mehren, of the Portland Cement Association. Its other members are Mr. Lawrence A. Downs, of the Illinois Central Railroad, and Mr. Martin J. Quigley, of the Quigley Publishing Company.

The Committee on Buildings and Grounds advises on major problems connected with Loyola's buildings and other properties. It is composed of Mr. David F. Bremner, of Bremner Brothers Biscuit Company, chairman, Mr. Edward A. Cudahy Jr., of the Cudahy Packing Company, and Mr. Walter J. Cummings, of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company.

ACADEMIC

THE REVEREND SAMUEL KNOX WILSON, S.J.,
chairman of the Academic Council.

Perfect unity of government is essential to any university. Realizing that such unity is best achieved through the operation of a body of representatives from the several divisions of the university, in 1928 the Reverend Robert M. Kelley, S.J., then President of Loyola University, founded the Academic Council. The Council is composed of the President, all regents, deans, and assistant deans, and the general registrar of the University. At regular meetings, presided over by Father Wilson, it considers important academic and student welfare problems affecting more than one division of the University.

There is no doubt that the Academic Council has had a greater effect upon the coordination and cohesion of the various units of the University than any other single factor. The spirit of cooperation and of making the needs of one division subservient to those of the whole University has spread down from the Council through the faculty to the student governing bodies, and finally to the students themselves, thus permeating the entire structure of Loyola.

Among the things decided upon this year by the Academic Council was a reduction in tuition granted to all full-time employees of the University and their children in the various academic and commerce divisions of the University (including Loyola Academy). This will extend to members of the faculty, clerical help, and the maintenance staff.

Also approved this year was the beginning of student personnel work on the Lake Shore Campus, with the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences acting as personnel officer and being assisted by the assistant dean, the registrar, and a special clerk to make the materials and information needed for this work readily available.

Among the changes made in the curricula was the abolition of the degree of Bachelor of Science in Medicine, to be effective at the close of the present academic year. This degree was given after the completion of three pre-medical work and the first year in the School of Medicine.

A proposal was made by the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences to arrange a special curriculum for a selected group of superior students working for the Bachelor of Arts degree which would enable them to secure that degree after three years of college work and should induce them to go on into the Graduate School. If successful, this special curriculum might eventually be extended into Loyola Academy, so that outstanding students could begin it in their third year of high school. The Academic Council approved the experiment and when the details are worked out it will be put into effect.

Among other questions discussed but not definitely decided upon at the time of this printing were the abolition of the degree of Bachelor of Science in Dentistry and the discontinuance of the combined curriculum leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree after three years of college and one year of medicine.

From the measures adopted by the council during the past year, it is rather obvious that at all times they have the best interests of the school in mind. To keep the school up to a high scholastic level, and at the same time maintain the personal relationship of faculty and student that is characteristic of Loyola is one of its greatest problems. The Council has been responsible for the course of action that Loyola has taken for the past eleven years and, with this responsibility has been extremely successful. It is through the work of this body, that the various divisions of the university have been enabled to work more as a unit and less as a separate school with no common ties to the rest of the departments. There can be little doubt that the Council will continue to be successful along these lines for many years to come.

Most authoritative of all student organizations is the Loyola Union Board of Governors, created in 1928, the supreme student governing body of the University. All students are ipso facto members of the Union, but only their elected representatives on the Board of Governors actually do the governing.

Generally, the Union, by which general name the Board of Governors is most commonly known, works towards all university integration and student harmony. Specifically, it runs four social functions a year; tells other organizations how to run theirs; holds money in trust for classes and clubs; searches for ways and means to attain financial independence; reflects student opinion to the Academic Council; meets once monthly and dines once yearly at a close-season banquet.

The Union is composed of three representatives from each school, the editor of the LOYOLA NEWS, and a faculty moderator. During its first year of existence it did little else than meet monthly and hold dances periodically, being hindered in its operations by differences of opinion among representatives from the various schools. Later on, however, representatives learned to subordinate the interests of one school to those of the whole university and harmony was affected. Standouts in the fight for greater cooperation among the schools were James Brennan, 1931-1932; Martin Fee, 1934-1935; John E. Brennan and John Hayes, 1936-1937.

This year the Union took an amazing bound forward in actual accomplishment. A well-balanced group of officers, elected from their number, took the helm last spring. President was Henry J. McDonald, this year a senior in the Day Law School. Long active on the Arts campus, McDonald's name is a password in the Law School as well. Serious, legal-minded and efficient, McDonald has proved an ideal leader. Vice-President was Jerome Burke, quiet but popular Medical senior. Gifted with Irish humor, as well as a rare sense of responsibility, Burke has been an invaluable cog in the Union. Youngest of the officers was Martin E. O'Shaughnessy, aggressive and executive-minded Arts junior, who was elected by acclamation to the treasurer's post. Emilie Kruppa, shy, pretty University College junior was the fourth member and secretary of the quartet which produced such striking changes in Union policies and action.

Executively speaking, this year the Union revised and streamlined its constitution, by-laws, and statutes. Vague points regarding student action and organization were clarified, as well as much legislative "dead timber lopped off. It sanctioned open campaigning for election to the Board of Governors, thus arousing student interest in their own representatives. More aggressive representation will result. It threw open Union records to the student eye by placing them in the Cudahy Library for inspection. It resolved to draw up annual reports to the student body. It completed plans for the Student Handbook, which will be put out in September.

Financially speaking, at the start of last September the Union, for the second time in its nine years of history opened the year deficit in the treasury. It speedily climbed out of the red with fervent cries of "Nevermore." It took a step towards campus concessions by furnishing the Arts student lounge with an electrical phonograph. It tightened up its internal finances; and provided for an annual public statement of finances.

Socially speaking, the Union amazed Loyolans. The Freshman Welcome Pow-Wow, held September 30 in the Alumni gymnasium, drew a record throng of over three hundred couples. It was the official opener of all-University social life. More lavish was the Fall Frolic, held November 11 in the beautiful Gold Room of the Congress Hotel and featuring Charlie Gaylord and his orchestra. An overflow crowd jammed into every corner and kept Union members busy rolling up carpets and setting tables. Something new was the St. Patrick's Day Dance held March 17 in the gymnasium. Originated by Treasurer O'Shaughnessy, it proved an overwhelming success, luring a full house of merry-makers. No small part of the success of the dance was due to THE LOYOLA NEWS, which merged with the Union to stage it. Last of the smash hits was the Senior Ball, which kept up the tradition of a social and financial success and ended the year in a dignified manner. The striking feature of this year's dances was the novel advertising displays before each, employing all sorts of stunts to arouse student interest.

ARTS COUNCIL

WILLIAM O'BRIEN
President of the Arts Student Council

The Arts Student Council is the official student governing body on the campus of the College of Arts and Sciences. In general its tasks are to organize and correlate student activities, to foster customs and traditions, and to effect friendly relations between faculty and students. Specifically it prepares agenda for all class meetings and assemblies, approves class jackets and rings, oversees class dances and other class undertakings, sponsors interclass football games, arranges tea-dances with Mundelein and Rosary Colleges, and has the last word in all student matters, subject, of course, to the dean.

The Council is composed of activity leaders and its own specially elected officers. This year under the exceptional leadership of William O'Brien, Arts senior, it was particularly active and efficient. Besides handling its routine business with great effectiveness and success, it also took upon itself the task of improving student government. In January it sanctioned open electioneering for all class and Council offices, and in March, to make for greater efficiency, it cut its own membership from seventeen to seven.

Front Row—Burns, Wendt, Driscoll, Bremer, Hruby, Marciniak, Garvey.

Second Row—M. O'Shaughnessy, McKeever, Shields, Dickow, Hofherr, F. O'Shaughnessy.

Back to Camera—O'Brien.

BAR ASSOCIATION

The students of the Loyola Law School voted their approval to the institution of the Loyola Bar Association during the fall semester. The old Law Council had become inactive and the new vehicle was substituted to revitalize and co-ordinate activities in the Law School.

Officers for this year were: Raymond Vonesh, day senior, president; Joseph Prindeville, night senior, vice-president; Joseph Czonstka, day junior, secretary; and Thomas Segan, night junior, treasurer. The offices are divided among the day and night school and the positions alternate yearly.

The greater part of the year was spent in the tedious process of organization. A constitution was formulated and attempts made to stimulate activities in the school. The first undertaking was a smoker to fete the Frosh.

The Loyola Bar Association consists of a faculty moderator appointed by the dean and four elected officers. At least one of the officers must be included on each of the various committees on student activities such as the committee on Legal Publications, on Brandeis Competition, on entertainment, on the Illinois Junior Bar Association, on Student Welfare, on Student convocations, and on Loyola Union Representatives.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

THE REVEREND FRANCIS J. GERST, S.J.,

Although the Graduate School of Loyola University has been in existence only thirteen years, its influence is widely felt in fields of research and scholarship. Although some graduate courses had been offered prior to 1926 by the various schools of the university, it was believed that such work suffered from lack of organization and supervision. Consequently, in that year, the Reverend William H. Agnew, S.J., then President of the University, founded the Graduate School. The first Dean of the Graduate School was the Reverend Austin G. Schmidt, S.J.

In 1926 the Master of Arts degree was offered in Education, Law, Medicine, Psychology, and Sociology, and the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Education. In subsequent years the graduate degrees in Law and Medicine were discontinued and the degree in Social Work replaced the degree in Sociology. Advanced courses leading to the Master's degree in History, English, Mathematics, Philosophy, French, and Chemistry were placed in the curriculum. Finally, doctoral work in English, Latin, Philosophy, and History was added.

In 1932 Father Schmidt resigned as Dean of the Graduate School when he took charge of the Loyola University Press. He was succeeded by the Reverend Samuel Knox Wilson, S.J., now President of the University, who held office twelve months. Father Wilson was followed by the Reverend Francis J. Gerst, S.J., the present Dean.

The school offers five degrees. The Master of Arts is the traditional and historical degree that has been offered by universities since the time of Bologna, Salerno, Paris and Oxford. The degree of Master of

THE ORAL COMPREHENSIVE EXAMINATION for a master's degree is a much feared ordeal for most graduate students. However, George Dubay takes his examination in mathematics quite in stride while being examined by Mr. Tordella, Father Gerst, and Dr. Mahony, members of the department.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

Science is not as old or as traditional as the Arts degree, but it now carries much weight and prestige. The degree of Doctor of Philosophy is, of course, the highest scholastic degree, indicating advanced and detailed research work. To meet a definite need, the degree of Master of Education was introduced. The work required for this degree is less stringent than the traditional Arts curriculum. After the establishment of the honors program in undergraduate work, an innovation for which Loyola received nationwide recognition, plans were immediately formulated for continuing honors work in the Graduate School, culminating in the degree of Master of Arts with Honors. The program which was developed has met with great success.

The purpose of the school is to develop scholars who are able to work independently, spurred on by intellectual curiosity and a love of knowledge. They must be fully equipped to engage in research in their chosen subject, and be able to make in their theses scholarly contributions to the field of knowledge.

Although each department has considerable freedom of scope as far as degree requirements, quality of work, and personal qualifications of applicants are concerned, no special departmental regulations are effective without the approval of the Dean. In his hands rest all matters pertaining to the immediate regulation of academic work. In this he is assisted by the Graduate Senate, of which he is chairman. Members of the Senate are appointed by the President of the University, and represent each department in which Graduate work is done.

It is the intention of the faculty of the Graduate School to perfect its courses of instruction so as to attract students in the upper scholastic strata of Catholic and non-Catholic colleges and universities in the middle west. Already Loyola University's Graduate School boasts the finest philosophy and history departments among the Catholic universities in this area. As an indication of this prominence to which the Graduate School has already attained, other universities with national reputations have been using Loyola's program for the degree of Master of Education as a model for their own curriculum. It will be the aim of the Graduate School in the future not merely to maintain its present high standards but to promote even higher ones in all fields of academic endeavor.

LAKE SHORE CAMPUS

THE LOYOLAN'S CODE OF HONOR is an ideal toward which all students of the university should strive.

THIS LECTURE BY DOCTOR MOGILNITSKY is a typical classroom scene on the Lake Shore Campus.

The College of Arts and Sciences is the oldest branch of the University. It was founded in 1870, and for many years was the only school. In 1909, when the University was chartered, the name of the school was changed from St. Ignatius College to the College of Arts and Sciences of Loyola University and in 1922 its location was changed from the west side to its present place on the lake shore. The north side campus now comprises eight buildings, and has an enrollment of about five hundred and sixty students.

The College of Arts and Sciences is the life-blood of the University. Its students lead the other divisions of the University in extra curricular activities and have more school spirit. They engage most in clubs and dramatic and musical organizations and provide most of the participants and enthusiasm for intramural and intercollegiate sports. They also hold the staff positions on the University publications.

The Reverend William A. Finnegan, S.J., has been Dean of the College since April, 1936. To him belongs the credit for innumerable improvements in the curriculum and increased school spirit on the campus.

The Reverend James V. Kelly, S.J., former assistant professor of philosophy, has just completed his first year as Dean of the freshmen; he guided them in the selection of courses and extracurricular activities.

The Madonna Della Strada Chapel, is the result of the untiring zeal of the Reverend James J. Mertz, S.J., who has worked long and arduously that the students of the Lake Shore Campus might have their own chapel. The chapel is treated in detail in another section of this book.

New in the curriculum this year were the General Culture courses—a further development of the Honors program inaugurated in the University three years ago. The new courses taught this year were Appreciation of Latin, Greek, French, and German Literatures, and Appreciation of the fine arts, Music and Painting. While designed primarily for Honors students and obligatory for them, the courses are also open to all upperclassmen. Three seniors and eight juniors have been following the honors program this year. New also is the expansion of the Department of Sociology on the Lake Shore Campus, thus enabling

ARTS AND SCIENCES

Arts Students to major in Sociology. Already ten seniors and eleven juniors are majoring in that department, many of whom intend to continue in social work after graduation.

Arts Freshmen began school one week earlier than the rest of the students. Affairs of Freshman Week included addresses by the President of the University, by the Dean and assistant Dean of the College, and by student activity leaders, as well as various placement tests and a medical examination. To further enable the freshmen to become accustomed to college work, a one hour course in orientation, compulsory for all, was taught by Dr. James C. Fitzgerald, assistant Dean of the University College.

One of the most important extracurricular reforms this year was the sanctioning of campus politics and open electioneering by the Student Council. The Council cut its membership from seventeen to seven to make for greater efficiency. Student leaders on the Arts Campus, this year took the initiative in a drive for increased all-university spirit. THE LOYOLA NEWS especially endeavored to cultivate this spirit by giving equal representation to all branches of the University.

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

DR. LOUIS D. MOORHEAD, (right), dean of the School of Medicine.

Loyola University School of Medicine was established as an integral part of Loyola University in September, 1915, by the purchase of Bennett Medical College, established in the year 1868. Owing to the limited quarters and undesirable location of this school, the property and equipment of the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery were purchased in 1917. The building thus secured was remodeled so as to afford adequate laboratory space for the pre-clinical departments. The courses in these departments were put upon a strict university basis. Loyola Medical School is recognized as an approved medical school by the Committee on Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association and is a member of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

In October, 1937, a contract was entered into by the President of Loyola University and the Mother Provincial of the Religious Sisters of Mercy of the Union of the United States, Province of Chicago, whereby Mercy Hospital became the university hospital of Loyola Medical School. Under the terms of the contract the medical policy of the hospital is vested in the Medical School while the financial and nursing administration of the Institution remains in the hands of the Sisters. The Dispensary, located in the Medical School building at 706 South Wolcott Avenue, was merged with Mercy Free Dispensary, the Out-Patient Department of Mercy Hospital.

The clinical units, housed on the campus of Mercy Hospital, are now designated as Mercy Hospital Loyola University Clinics and are administered by an Executive Board of which the Dean of the Medical School is chairman. The facilities of the Department of Pathology of the Medical School have been housed in a unit of Mercy Hospital-Loyola University Clinics and a new Department, the Department of Experimental Medicine, under the Chairmanship of Dr.

DR. CAMPIOGNI lectures to the medical students in the amphitheater at Mercy Hospital.

The Dean of the School of Medicine is Dr. Louis David Moorhead, M.S., M.D., K.S.G., who is one of the foremost surgeons in the middle west. Dr. Moorhead is an outstanding Catholic layman, whose services to the Catholic ideal of medical education has brought him Papal knighthood and a decoration from the King of Italy.

Within the past two years the curriculum of the School of Medicine has been radically revamped to conform to the most modern principles of medical education now in force in the leading medical schools in the country. The full-time faculty has been almost doubled during the past year and a new Department of Public Health, Preventive Medicine, and Bacteriology has been established under the Chairmanship of Dr. Earl E. Kleinschmidt, M.D., Dr. P.H., Associate Professor of Preventive Medicine. Associate with Dr. Kleinschmidt are Dr. John H. Bailey, Ph.D., Dr. P.H., and Dr. John Klimek, Ph.D. Under the leadership of Dr. Kleinschmidt has been set up an entire new curriculum in Public Health and Preventive Medicine and the foundation has been laid for the only organized School of Public Health in Chicago which is on a university basis.

SCHOOL OF LAW

The Loyola University School of Law has the distinction of being the first professional school in the university. This important unit traces its beginning to the Lincoln College of Law, founded in 1908 at the instigation of the administrative officers and Alumni of Saint Ignatius College, parent school of Loyola. When Loyola received its charter as a University one year later, Lincoln College of Law became the Loyola University School of Law. Thus, this school was one of the most important developments in the plan for expansion of small Saint Ignatius College. The school is accredited by the American Bar Association and is a member of the Association of American Law Schools, the highest law school accrediting body.

The School has owed its success in an inestimable measure to the capable deans who have had its destiny under their control. The first Dean of the Law School was William Dillon, a graduate of the Catholic University and King's Inn, Dublin, as well as the Middle Temple, London. He held his office from 1908 until 1915, when he retired to engage in private practice. Prior to his becoming Dean, he had served as editor of the NEW WORLD.

Following Dean Dillon was Arnold D. McMahon, who held office from 1915 to 1925. Under his leadership many far-reaching and important changes were made. The night courses were lengthened to the BRIEFING CASES requires that many sources of all types be examined and thoroughly digested in order that all sides of the question may be fully covered. Many such assignments are the lot of Law students as Frank Corboy to the left.

LIBRARY WORK occupies a major portion of the law students' time. The law branch of the Cudahy library is more than ample to meet the needs of the most exacting student.

MR. JOHN HAYES conducts a class in contracts explaining and clarifying any points that the students may find difficult and hard to understand.

present four year basis and a three year day school was added. The administration of the succeeding dean, John V. McCormick, was particularly noteworthy for the fostering of various clubs and activities. The Brandeis competition and the Junior Bar Association were both begun under his guidance. When Dean McCormick resigned to assume a seat on the municipal bench, a graduate of Harvard Law School and a teacher at Loyola for nine years, Mr. John C. Fitzgerald, was made acting dean. In 1938 he officially became the fourth dean of the Loyola University School of Law.

The past year in the Law School has been one of reorganization. The faculty has been making numerous changes both in scholastic requirements and in activities. As a means of securing the highest scholastic standards among its graduates, this year the faculty inaugurated a new system of comprehensive examinations whereby each examination includes all the material that has been covered on that subject prior to the time of examination. This method, although it places a heavier burden upon the students while in school, will insure organization and correlation of things learned in the different courses throughout the period spent in Law School.

Due to the intensity of the curriculum, Law students have little time for extra-curricular activity which is not directly connected with their chosen profession. The Brandeis competition, organized six years ago, has proved most popular and beneficial. This competition consists in arguing a case, in a manner closely paralleling actual law practice. Two students represent the defendant and two the plaintiff. Each class is organized into law clubs which argue with other clubs on a competitive basis until they reach the finals. Participants in the Brandeis competition represent the school in intercollegiate competition, which is known as the Moot Court Competition. This year Raymond Vonesh and William Lamey defeated Philip Collins and John McKenzie in the finals of the Brandeis. Lamey, McKenzie, and Miss Eva Charles, representing Loyola in the Moot Court Competition, battled through to the finals, but lost a close decision to Northwestern. Mr. John J. Waldron served as faculty adviser to the competition.

This year was particularly notable for the formation of a new student governing body, known as the Loyola Bar Association. The new system of government, modeled after the charter of the Chicago Bar Association, represents the first attempt in this state to conduct Law School activities in accordance with those principles established and followed by the regular bar associations. The new system was adopted in the belief that it would develop a more intensive interest both in Law School and in all-University activities, as well as afford a thorough knowledge of the proper function of bar associations to the would-be lawyers. All students of the Law School are ipso-facto members of the association.

Raymond Vonesh, day Law senior, was elected the first president of the Bar Association; other officers are Joseph Prindville, night senior, vice-president; Joseph Czonstka, day junior, secretary; and Thomas Fegan, night junior, treasurer. Under these capable leaders, there is no doubt that the new association will become firmly established and will be able to carry out its ideals and hopes for the future with great success.

The curriculum of the Law School in a broad fashion follows the traditional method of division. The three fundamental and basic sections of the law are considered to be as follows: non-contract, contract and property. These divisions are subdivided into subjects which can be more easily handled. Under this system, the students learn torts, the division of non-contract law dealing with the violation of personal rights arising by the creation of the law; property law, with respect to the basic rights in land, titles, and future estates; contracts, and the several branches which have been fully developed recently and have been again divided into other branches, as agency, insurance, partnership, and domestic relations which are based on contract and moral concepts as well as protected by statutes; corporations, public and private; trusts, which involve contracts and property laws; Bailments, carriers, sales, and negotiable instruments, which are members of the contract group; and wills, a statutory subject covering the right to dispose of property at death. Administrative law, labor law, aeronautical law, and restitutive are new fields of activity covered by courses recently added to the law school curriculum. As in most Jesuit law schools, a course in jurisprudence is offered as the philosophic basis for the positive law courses.

The degrees granted by the school are the Bachelor of Laws and the Doctor of Jurisprudence. Only the fact that the latter requires a more thorough background in general college work distinguishes it from the former.

The final product of the Loyola University School of Law is a well rounded person, trained in Catholic ideals and prepared to apply them in his future work. Since the reputation of a school depends on the quality of its graduates, it is imperative that they be men outstanding in their profession of law, as well as in their practice both through example and precept of the Catholic way of life. Loyola has been proud of its law graduates, and hopes that their careers will enable her to continue to be proud of them.

SCHOOL OF COMMERCE

MR. HENRY T. CHAMBERLAIN, (right), dean of the School of Commerce.

MR. WILLIAM ROBERTS, (left), on whose shoulders many of the problems involved in the administration of the day division of the School of Commerce have fallen.

For a long time it was believed that the best training for a business executive was the regular college course plus a period of apprenticeship in a given industry. However, due to the complexity of modern business, it has become next to impossible to obtain a thorough knowledge of the principles underlying business from first hand experience. For that reason the Loyola University School of Commerce was formed in 1924.

The School of Commerce has acquired a wide reputation in the middle west, particularly in regard to its training of Certified Public Accountants. About twenty per cent of those who have taken the C. P. A. exams in Chicago since 1930 have prepared for the examination at Loyola and about forty per cent of the successful candidates have been Loyola-trained men and women.

The curriculum in the Commerce School is arranged for three types of students. It enables the high school graduate to work for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce, acquiring a general knowledge of economics. It is suited for those already in the business world, who wish to obtain either a general knowledge of the workings of business or aid in the particular work in which they are employed. And lastly the school offers special training in accounting for those who wish to take the C. P. A. examination.

The Commerce School holds day classes on the Lake Shore Campus and late-afternoon and evening classes on the downtown campus at 28 North Franklin Street. Thus the student who is able to devote only a part of his time to his education finds it convenient to take late afternoon and evening classes on the downtown campus, which can easily be reached by a short walk from the loop. Likewise the younger student who wishes to obtain a fully-rounded college education can attend the day classes on the Lake Shore Campus. Indeed, the north side Commerce students are an integral part of the student body on the Lake Shore Campus, partaking in the same extra-curricular activities and exercises as the Arts students.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

Not all the students who would obtain academic degrees from Loyola University would be able to attend the day classes of the College of Arts and Sciences on the Lake Shore Campus. Indeed, it was to fulfill the need of a Catholic college of liberal arts, which would be easily accessible to those whose time during the day was taken up with other pursuits, that the University College was founded in 1914. Located on the downtown campus at 28 North Franklin Street, it offers full curricula leading to baccalaureate degrees in late afternoon, evening, and Saturday classes.

Due to lack of time which they necessarily demand, extra-curricular activities at the University College do not reach the proportions of those on the Lake Shore Campus, yet are by no means to be overlooked. The Loyola Service Guild periodically sponsors lectures on topics of current interest and holds several parties each year for the under-privileged children of Holy Family Parish School. The Della Strada Sodality, a branch of the international organization bearing the same name, holds benefit parties, lectures, and an annual retreat. The Alumnae Association yearly enlarges the fund for scholarships. This year all previous registration records were broken in the autumn and spring quarters.

The magnificent dome of West Baden College surmounts the philosophical studies of the Jesuit scholastics in the Chicago Province of the Society of Jesus. This year West Baden completes its fifth year as a division of Loyola University; but its previous history is both colorful and surprising.

Prior to its becoming a college, West Baden was known as West Baden Springs Hotel, an exclusive health resort famed for its natural springs. Earliest mention of the springs was made by George Rogers Clark in the memoirs of his famous expedition to Kaskaskia and Vincennes. Shortly before the Civil War a hotel was built in the spot and in 1888 it passed into the hands of Mr. Lee W. Sinclair. After the original building had been destroyed by cyclone and a second hotel had been consumed by fire in 1901, Mr. Sinclair in 1902 built the magnificent 708 room structure that now stands on the spot.

The hotel building is a marvel of architecture. The six hundred room structure, octahedral in shape, is crowned by a huge dome of glass and steel over two hundred feet in diameter. This dome, the largest of its kind in the world, is supported by twenty-four majestic columns set in the walls around the magnificent Atrium, or Pompeian Court, which is ornamented with marble and tile. The architecture is predominantly Moorish. Extensive grounds, a nine hole golf course, the beautiful sulphur spring buildings, and the gorgeous Italian gardens lend a setting that is incomparable in grandeur. At the time of Mr. Sinclair's death in 1916, the hotel was estimated at $3,500,000. In 1922, Mr. Edward Ballard took over complete management of the establishment. In the years following, however, with the gradual shift of the vacation area from the central states, the hotel declined in popularity, and, in the depths of the depression in 1932, closed its doors.

In 1934, Mr. Ballard donated it to the Society of Jesus for the training of young Jesuits for the priesthood. At the beginning of this year the Reverend Charles H. Cloud, S.J., succeeded the Reverend Allen P. Farrell, S.J., as Dean of West Baden College. The President and rector of the College is the Reverend Thomas Donnelly, S.J.

At West Baden not only are all the branches of scholastic philosophy taught, but auxiliary courses in Biology, Chemistry, Physics, and Mathematics give the necessary scientific background for the philosophical studies. Many of the young Jesuit scholastics have already obtained the Bachelor of Arts degree from Loyola University and are enrolled in its graduate school. Besides the philosophical courses, special courses in English, History, Classics, Speech, Education, and the Sciences are offered.

Chief among the extracurricular activities is the Sodality, which is divided into several groups. The Catholic Evidence Guild practices the technique of open air preaching, has given several public lectures during the past year, and sponsors the group working to spread a knowledge of the Catholic Faith in the neighborhood. The Mission Circle studies mission theory and the biographies of famous Jesuit missionaries, as well as acting as a patron of the Patna Mission Stamp Mart. Catholic newspaper style and propaganda methods were among the subjects inquired into by the Journalism Group. This group also produced "And They Heil Hitler . . .?" a one act expose of Nazi propaganda, written by one of the members, Mr. Harry Gilmore, S.J. The Drama Section of the Sodality made original researches into the possibilities of a Catholic drama and the methods used by modern playwrights in putting their message on the stage. At the final meeting they enacted scenes from four Broadway hits portraying the unsound philosophical basis of the modern theatre. This was followed by a three scene musical satire, "Blood Over Mexico", which was set to music and directed by Mr. John Reinke, S.J. The Social Action Academy, examining the modern social problems in the light of the Papal encyclicals, solved the problem of distribution by the corporative state.

THE PHYSICAL SCIENCES are embraced in the West Baden Student's course of studies as well as the classics and philosophy. The students to the left, F. Filas, T. Hecht, and E. W. Burke, conduct an experiment in chemistry.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS are not neglected in past times at West Baden. A. Blanchard, H. Pingstock, J. Schwind, R. Weltin, J. Tennert, and J. Reinke (at the piano) rehearse a skit to be presented for the other students and surrounding townspeople.

The Classical Academy under the direction of Mr. Raymond Schoder, S.J., continued its fortnightly meetings to inspire interest in the vitally human literature of the ancient world. The Scientific Academy, with Mr. Louis DeGenova, S.J., as president, popularized the new theories and latest inventions by motion pictures and lectures. A new movement in the form of the Bellarmine Sermon Society gave weekly practice and criticism to the future pulpit orators. Those interested in doing apostolic work among the underprivileged deaf and dumb continued their activity in the Dactylogy Club. Conferences on the Sacred Heart, organized this year by Mr. John McKechney, S.J., centered their attention on the relation of the devotion of the Sacred Heart to the Society of Jesus.

Under the direction of Father Cloud, a series of Forum Lectures was arranged, in which prominent authorities addressed the scholastics on specialized subjects. The chief intramural athletic activities were golf, baseball, basketball, and volleyball. Many improvements of the grounds were due to the initiative of the young clerics, especially the conversion of the unused Hygeia springhouse into a shrine to the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The theatre arts were not neglected. On the Feast of St. Catherine, patron of the Philosophers, the Gilbert and Sullivan musical, "The Gondoliers", was produced. This year, under the inspiration of Mr. Edward Conrath, S.J., the fourteen piece Philosophers Orchestra was organized, and gave three recitals.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

In the year 1914 the Loyola University School of Social Work was founded. The guiding hand of this first Catholic department of its kind in the country was that of the late Reverend Frederic Seidenburg, S.J., whose name will ever be most intimately associated not only with Loyola but with social work in Chicago. When, in 1932, Father Seidenburg was called to Detroit, he was ably succeeded by the Reverend Thomas Egan, S.J. In 1937, the Department of Social Work of the Graduate School became a separate professional school under the direction of the Reverend Elmer Barton, S.J.

During the quarter century of its existence, the School has sought to equip young men and women for their all-important service to society. In keeping with the Jesuit system of education, this has meant the teaching not only of professional theory and practice but also of fundamental principles of philosophy and ethics. With its well integrated program, the APPLIED SOCIAL WORK is one of the requisites for most courses at the School of Social Work. George Clough, a student, makes a call on one of his regular assigned visits.

CLOSE CONTACT between student and teacher is one of the distinctive notes in this school. Miss Lloyd, an instructor, and Sidney St. Leger, a member of the student body, hold a conference.

WRITING UP CASE HISTORIES is an important part of the training each social worker receives. This is a typical scene of the worker preparing their reports for their classes.

School has attracted approximately one hundred full and part time students from a wide area. They are being prepared for positions in Catholic as well as public agencies.

Changes have had to occur to meet the demands of progress. Each year, therefore, has seen significant developments in the curriculum. From one that in the early days numbered but few courses, the program has developed into a two-year, minimum sequence that gives the student a basic background as well as some specialization in his particular field of interest.

The training has never been completely confined to the classroom. The opportunity for broader experience in field work has been provided with the inclusion of several new recognized agencies. Elizabeth E. Lloyd, M.A., as Director of Field Work, has done valuable work in coordinating this field program with the classroom instruction.

The expansion of governmental services to those in need has necessitated the preparation of trained personnel for administration. In attempting to meet this need, the School has developed a sequence of courses, including Social Security Legislation, Public Assistance, Social Insurance, Unemployment Compensation, and the newest of fields, Housing Programs, all under the direction of Katherine Radke, Ph.D.

Besides the two members of the faculty already mentioned, Mary J. McCormick, Ph.D., Alice B. Hora, M.A., Roman L. Harenski, Ph.D., and Daniel E. O'Keefe, M.S., are full time instructors who have substantially altered course content to teach the current developments.

SCHOOLS OF NURSING

VISITING THE

ST. ANNE'S has a well equipped library and study room. Nurses Wilson, Monahan, Hughes, Curtin, Gunderson, Schmidt and Plotz avail themselves of their opportunity to add to the knowledge that they have obtained in the classroom.

ASSISTING AT OPERATIONS is an extremely important part of a nurse's training. Nurses Rose Mary Cassin, Bernadine Georgan and Catherine Burns, prepare themselves in the surgery for an operation.

AN INSIGHT INTO CHEMISTRY is required to obtain the degree of Registered Nurse. Miss Melba Davis does some analytic weighing as part of her instruction in laboratory technique.

PREPARING AND SERVING the patients' meals is an important duty of a nurse. Nurses Maker, Felton, and Zenslicka are shown in the kitchen making the food ready to be served.

NURSING SCHOOLS

EVERY NURSE MUST EAT, and from the smile on their faces they evidently enjoy meal time. Nurses Kiefer, Stekel, Smillie, and Moran wait in line for their lunches as served cafeteria style.

COMPLETE CLEANLINESS is the concomitant of modern advance in medicine. Nurses Wykowski, Kelz, Prieto, Quartuck, and Carver don rubber gloves before treating patients.

NURSES La Rocque, Kalchik, Albihl, and Mangan watch as Sister Mary Margaritis demonstrates a difficult point in procedure. This intimate student teacher instruction is characteristic of the nursing schools.

RETURNING TO DUTY this group of student nurses enjoy a walk through the grounds of St. Elizabeth's. Ample opportunities for rest and relaxation are afforded by the hospitals to enable the students to work efficiently.

SAINT

THE NURSES' RESIDENCE at St. Bernard's Hospital is one of the newest and best equipped of its kind in the city. It contains a library, and classrooms as well as laboratories of unusual quality.

INTENSELY DRAMATIC are pictures of operations. The slightest slip may mean death. This part of the nurses' training must be of the highest quality in order that they may be completely efficient and dependable in the case of emergencies.

BERNARD'S

SCHOOL OF NURSING

St. Bernard's Hospital was founded in 1903 by the Religious Hospitalers, an order of Canadian Nuns. These zealous sisters have built St. Bernard's Hospital and Nursing School into a unit of which the medical profession in Chicago may be very proud. A nursing program has been built which is rich in scientific, cultural, and extra-curricular data.

The nurses' residence is connected directly to the hospital and houses over one hundred nurses. The house itself is equipped with a library, class rooms, and laboratories, which are of the highest quality.

Religion is the most important activity in which the nurses engage. The Sodality and Cisca are very active and promote Catholic ideals through their monthly meetings and discussions. Christmas baskets are also an important function of this group, as well as is the annual three day retreat.

Not only these, but other activities of a social nature have been provided for by the faculty. Plays, motion pictures, picnics, and dances all fill the program of the nurse. The Junior-Senior dinner is the outstanding event of the year, and is invariably successful. The Senior picnic, at which this class is the guest of the Alumnae, is the closing event of the school year.

THE STERILIZATION OF ALL BANDAGES and surgical instruments, as well as anything else that would spread infection is one of a nurse's chief duties. Nurse Alice King stores the now sterilized towels in sanitary cabinets.

St. Elizabeth's Hospital has the distinction of being the second oldest hospital in the system of nursing schools affiliated with Loyola. The hospital was founded in 1886, while the nursing school itself was initiated in 1914 by the Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ. Its affiliation with the University took place in 1920, shortly after the construction of a new and enlarged hospital. The new hospital has accommodations for three hundred and twenty patients, and is particularly well equipped in all regards.

Besides the regular course of studies which are prescribed for the various classes, the nurses also take part in various types of activities which are similar to those enjoyed in other schools of the university. The annual initiation of the freshmen by the junior nurses culminating in the annual Halloween party, is one of the brightest spots of the social season.

The thanksgiving dinner sponsored by the Senior Class had its measure of success, while the next holiday, Christmas, was ushered in with a candy and cookie sale, which proved extremely popular. The annual Christmas party itself, with the presenting of gifts and singing of carols, and all the other trimmings of the season was one of the most pleasurable events of the year.

The Senior dinner-dance which ranks as the social event of the year, took place at the Drake Hotel on February fifteenth, to the music of Wayne King. This nationally known orchestra, playing in the famous Gold Coast Room was coupled with the efforts of the Senior Class President, Josephine Nalazek, and her aides, to make the affair the crowning event of their years at school.

With this affair, all the activities, except graduation, terminate. The undeniably successful accomplishments of the student leaders have been aided by the spirit of cooperation which they have received from all the students.

THE COLUMBUS

SISTER M. CLEMENT, R.N., A.B., director of nursing at the Columbus School of Nursing.

Columbus Hospital, located on the North Side opposite Lincoln Park, was founded in 1905 by Mother Frances Cabrini, who was beatified November 13th, 1938. It is maintained by the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, who have by their careful and thorough training gained a reputation for the Nursing School which is of the highest quality. The school provides the regular three year course in nursing, during which time the student is given both theoretical and practical work in the department of obstetrics, gynecology, medicine, pediatrics, orthopedics, diet therapy and emergency work. Through these well equipped and well taught courses, the graduate nurse has a training of the highest quality.

This school of nursing is unique in the recreational advantages it is able to afford its student nurses. The proximity of Lincoln Park makes tennis, ice-skating, and swimming some of the more easily obtainable sports. It also affords a pleasant spot for picnics and parties both in the fall and in the spring.

The religious activities of this Nursing School are the most important events of the year to the nurses. On this account, the Sodality of the Children of Mary receives the most support of all organizations. Under the leadership of the Sodality, the Nurses maintain the annual custom of singing Christmas carols on the eve of the feast, and the distributing of holly to the patients. The coronation of the Blessed Mother in May in which all the nurses participate is the most beautiful event of the year.

The social life of the nurses is diversified and varied providing them with a full quota of interests. Parties and dances are held on the various holiday occasions, and this year culminated in a card and bunco party, held in June before the vacation. The ideal of progress has been the keynote of this year at Columbus, and all indications point to the fulfillment of this objective.

SAINT ANNE'S SCHOOL OF NURSING

St. Anne's Hospital, originally organized as an auxiliary to St. Elizabeth's Hospital to care for tuberculosis patients, obtained its charter in 1908 as a separate unit. Five years later, in 1913, its nursing school was officially opened. From a class of eight nurses, in its first year, the school has developed until at the present time, the student body numbers over one hundred.

As is customary in most nursing schools, the Freshmen put the Probationers through their paces in an informal initiation. The ceremony was held around a campfire in the park surrounding the nurses' home. The traditional Halloween party was sponsored by the Juniors; the nurses used their originality in designing and wearing novel costumes to this affair. The Senior Ball, before the Thanksgiving Holidays, was held at the Graemere Hotel, under the capable baton of Carl Sands.

THE PREPARATION OF FOOD in the diet kitchen provides the practical application of the nurses' study of dietetics. Nurses Alice McClelland and Jane Feeney take turns in this branch of education.

SURROUNDED BY A BEAUTIFUL PARK, St. Anne's Hospital is one of the most completely equipped hospitals on the west side. The building itself is an architectural model, and fulfills the function of beauty as well as utility.

MISS HELEN M. WALDERBACH, R.N., directress of nursing at St. Anne's Hospital has just completed twenty-five years of service.

During the winter, the Sisters sponsored a series of sleigh rides for those who enjoy winter sports. The nuns also gave a Christmas party for the nurses, which ranked as the most looked-for event on the nurses' social calendar. On Christmas day, the annual singing of Christmas carols to the patients took place, to cheer those who were forced to spend their holiday in a hospital.

Since this year marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of Miss Helen Walderbach as superintendent of the Nurses, a gala celebration was held in her honor on the last day of February.

With the end of the semester, the probationary period of the freshmen nurses reached a close. Those who had proved themselves worthy of the tasks that were given them during the preceding six months were formally made students of the Nursing School of St. Anne's. This goal toward which they have been striving is made possible by the happy combination of work and play throughout the school year.

OAK PARK SCHOOL OF NURSING

EVEN FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS come under the head of education for the nurses. While it is not, of course, taught formally, Nurses Frances Hartman and Emily Cecchini compare notes on the best possible arrangement.

SISTER ST. TIMOTHY, R.N., Ch.B., is directress of nurses at the Oak Park School of Nursing.

The training that a nurse receives gives her an insight and an experience that is difficult to duplicate. This is true only where this training is complete and wholly adequate; nowhere does it more capably fulfill these qualifications than at Oak Park Nursing School. The Hospital, with which the school is affiliated, was founded in 1906 by the Sisters of Misericorde in the same year that Oak Park was incorporated as a village. The Hospital has grown until now it has one hundred and seventy beds, and a well-manned staff of physicians.

In 1917, the nursing school became affiliated with Loyola University, and in 1933 it became an integral part of the University by becoming one of its nursing units. Today, its students receive a well rounded cultural as well as professional education. It is the aim of the school not only to develop proficiency in the art of nursing, but also to engender in its students high ideals and a true design for living.

During the past year the list of social activities has been very complete. It is to fulfill their ideal of imparting a complete education, that the faculty have cooperated in holding these events. These activities are planned to draw out latent talents and to give exercise to favorite hobbies. Formal teas, an annual Christmas party, student dances, and card parties are sponsored. All students are eligible to become members of the Dramatic Club, directed by Mrs. Walter J. Donovan, and of the Glee Club under the guidance of Mrs. John Conway.

Thus, Oak Park Hospital, being fully accredited, not only gives its students every opportunity to attain the desired "R.N." and the Bachelor of Science degree from Loyola University, but also to fill creditably their appointed places in a world which demands social and cultural attainments as well as technical or professional training.

THIS HOSPITAL is the finest one in Oak Park. Through its expert facilities and competent staff it not only serves the village but also Chicago.

SAINT FRANCIS SCHOOL OF NURSING

St. Francis School of Nursing is the most recent addition to the Loyola University Nursing school affiliates. The Hospital itself is one of the largest hospitals in the Chicago area, with a bed capacity of three hundred and fifty and a medical staff of almost ninety members.

The Nursing School, under the direction of Sr. M. Gertrudis, R.N., numbers over one hundred students, who are very carefully examined as to their qualifications. The school has the reputation of being one of the most difficult to obtain entrance to, in the city. As an evidence of the high quality of the student nurses, over one quarter of the Freshman Class registering last fall, had two to four years of education beyond high school.

Besides offering the regular nursing courses leading to the degree of Registered Nurse, the school also offers several graduate courses in surgery, first aid, and obstetrics.

The activities at St. Francis are many and varied. The opening event of the season is the annual welcome party given to the pre-clinical group. The Glee Club presented its usual Christmas concert, as well as providing the choir music during the year. One of the most important organizations is the Dramatic Club, which this year presented a full length play at the Christmas party, as well as a series of four one-act plays on February 24th, at the Loyola Community Theatre. The dramatic club owes much of its success this year to the capable direction of Catherine Wallace Hennessey.

The spiritual exercises consist of an annual retreat, given this year by Reverend Father Phillips, S.J., the capping and reception into the Sodality of the pre-clinical students, and the coronation of the May Queen.

The climax to the year's activities and the social event of the season was the senior dance. An event looked forward to by all the student nurses, as well as a great number of the Alumnae, the dance was presented at the Lake Shore Athletic Club, on June 2, and was attended by over 150 couples. It proved to be a suitable climax to the year's work and an agreeable preface to the summer vacation.

CLUBS, TO ACHIEVE ENDS AND IDEALS BY COOPERATIV

• FRATERNITIES TO AID

THE STUDENT SOCIALLY AND SCHOLASTICALLY

A CAPABLE EXECUTIVE, Mrs. Michael O'Laughlin has enabled the Mothers' Club to enjoy a successful season. Through her efforts, as also through those of the other officers, the scholarship fund has been augmented.

THE

The year 1938-1939 has seen the continued development of the Mother's Club, one of the loyalest and most efficient of the many organizations connected with Loyola University. Composed of the mothers of the students of the College of Arts and Sciences, it is the purpose of this group to further the reputation of Loyola University and to endeavor to help the school in a material way.

Under the presidency of Mrs. Michael W. O'Laughlin, the Mother's Club this year continued the program inaugurated with the founding of the Club five years ago. In order to make the mothers of the students better acquainted with the school which their sons attend, a series of parties was held at intervals throughout the year. These gatherings took the form of dessert-bridge parties, the mothers of the students in various classes meeting separately.

In charge of the arrangements for the meeting of the senior mothers was Mrs. Thomas W. Burns and this party, which like all of them was an outstanding success, took place on January 24th. The party for the junior mothers was taken care of by Mrs. August Hummert and occurred on February 28th. The gatherings of the mothers of the members of the sophomore and freshman classes took place on March 28th and April 25th respectively. Chairwomen for these affairs were Mrs. Schlottman and Mrs. E. P. Carroll.

Climaxing the year's activities for the Mother's club was its first annual party held at the Stevens Hotel, May 19th. An innovation it proved to be a big success. Proceeds from the affair were turned over to the Reverend William A. Finnegan, S.J., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences for the scholarship fund.

AS PRESIDENT OF THE FATHERS' CLUB, Mr. Edward Nesbitt has been in no little measure responsible for the successful year just completed. Under his guidance, the club swelled the ranks of its members through its interesting program.

To foster the dad's interest in the son's school life, and through that interest to help make Loyola a better place for him, is the purpose of the Fathers' Club. The club was organized four years ago, and has grown in size, reputation, and achievement ever since.

Each year the Fathers' Club throws one giant card party and dance, cooperates with the Mothers' Club on a second, and holds Father and Son and Faculty get-together smokers and a banquet.

This year's first party was the Fall Festival, held November 18th, featuring old fashioned barn dance contests. By means of this party, the Fathers' Club helped to equip the gym with the new collapsible bleacher seats. Most outstanding and auspicious event in the year was the annual Father and Son banquet to honor the basketball team and Coach Leonard D. Sachs. The banquet was held at the Knickerbocker Hotel, March 28th and was attended by a record breaking crowd. The climaxing event of the year was the card party and dance held at the Stevens Hotel, May 19th, in cooperation with the Mothers' Club for the benefit of the scholarship fund.

In no small way responsible for the success and innovations of the Fathers' Club this year was president Mr. Edward P. Nesbitt. Under the guidance of Reverend William A. Finnegan, S.J., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, moderator, and the counselling of the officers and committees, the course of the club was guided through the most progressive year in their history.

WORK AND PLAY are intermingled for the mothers at their various card parties. That they enjoy these contacts with the school, that they feel that they are, through their acquaintance with each other, establishing a better and a truer Loyola spirit, is indisputable. Besides benefiting the school through these intangibles, they also are giving positive evidence of their loyalty through their contributions to the scholarship fund.

THIS IS A TYPICAL MEETING of the Fathers' Club at which the members plan the events for their sons' and their own amusement. These men, as well as the rest of the members of the Club, are intensely interested in the welfare of their sons; this interest has become a vital and influential factor around Loyola.

BOB SWEENEY, president of the International Relations Club can already rank as an expert in the field. It is certain that through his knowledge of affairs he has been able to guide many of the discussions capably.

THE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB

Greatest of all the temporal problems that are confronting the modern world is that of international relations. The suddenly changing national and international policies of nations are a constant threat to world peace and harmony. In this day when national boundaries are seen to change overnight, when nations are contesting with each other in the race for military power, and when civil war is either going on or imminent in several countries throughout the world, the question of international relations presents a constantly interesting and endless topic for discussion.

The International Relations Club aims at giving Loyola students a firmer grasp on the international situation. Under the guidance of Dr. Edward P. Lilly, professor of history, the group attacks world problems and divides them into their component parts. The parts are then studied, and an effort made to apprehend the proper relationships of cause and effect. Thus while studying a particular problem, the students also learn how to go about the solving of international problems in a scientific way.

Student officers for this year were Robert Sweeney, Arts senior, president, and John Hennessy, Arts sophomore, secretary. General direction of this year's study was the various movements in Europe. The club also studied the influences of the different European nations on South American countries as compared with those of the United States. To these ends the club obtained the services of various speakers, both from the faculty of the University and from outside sources. Such speakers were of great assistance to the club in understanding world problems, and were greatly appreciated by the members. Also, on occasions, individual members of the club prepared papers on various topics and presented them at the meetings.

"WHAT'S HITLER'S NEXT MOVE?" is one of the questions which this active organization finds of particular interest. Here, Ed Nesbitt is laying down his opinions on the subject with the help of a map of Europe to members Burke, Healy, Hennessy, Wallace and Sweeney. Under the moderatorship of Dr. Lilly, history professor, this organization is well equipped to assign current events to their proper historical focus.

GLASS-BLOWING, electroplating, soap bubbles, and photograph developing are but a few of the many items demonstrated to this club of science students. The demonstrations and lectures are given both by students and by authorities in their respective fields. The topics are carefully selected to correlate with the matter taken in class with special emphasis upon industrial applications.

The Chemistry Club, founded at St. Ignatius on the West Side is the oldest organization of its kind on the Arts Campus. Its purpose is to offer the student a more interesting and practical outlook on this field than he would meet in class. The club is somewhat of a connecting link or stepping stone between the chemistry of the classroom and its application in industry. The lectures and demonstrations are devised and given to the student on some special interest. This year some very interesting papers have been given on subjects appealing to those who take an interest in the relation of chemistry to industry.

Not least among the activities of the club is the arrangement of field trips where the actual application of the principles is studied. Several of these trips were taken in the course of this year from which much valuable information was gleaned by the interested student.

The first paper read to the club concerned itself with the chemistry of photography. Mr. John Tordella who has dabbled in this field prepared a striking aggregation of facts dealing with this popular scientific hobby and the part chemistry plays in its development. Besides this paper, several others treating such subjects as electro plating, glass blowing, war gasses, and many other subjects were submitted by the students.

This is an organization by and for the student, but, as is the way with all such groups, a very particular note of thanks is due to the generous and unstinted help and guidance of its moderator Mr. Schmeing.

BELLARMINÉ

PHILOSOPHER-DE-LUXE is Tom Shields, president of the intellectual and erudite Philosophy Club. This year, by his thorough knowledge of the subject, he has ably led the discussion groups through the mazes of Aristotle, Aquinas, Descartes, and the other ancient and modern philosophers which were brought up.

The aim of the Robert Bellarmine Philosophy Club is to provide students interested in philosophy an opportunity for discussion outside of the classroom. This year the club first discussed the various proofs for the existence of God, and then turned its attention to modern philosophies of life.

The Rev. John F. McCormick, S.J., chairman of the Department of Philosophy, continued as moderator of the club. The student chairman was Thomas Shields, Art senior.

Among the members who gave papers before the club during the year were: William Wallace, George Masek, Charles Nesbitt, Edward Nesbitt, Harry Homan, Florence Verhulst, Robert Denkwalter, John Lyons, Arthur Fenner, John Felten, Frank Knoll, Edward Marciniak, and Richard Garvey. The club met every two weeks.

On the feast of St. Thomas Aquinas, March 7, the club sponsored a symposium in the Cudahy lounge. John Lyons spoke on "St. Thomas on Liberality"; Arthur Fenner Spoke on "St. Thomas on the Desire to Know"; and John Felten spoke on "St. Thomas on War". An address on St. Thomas was given by Father McCormick.

Members of the philosophy department, besides Father McCormick, who have taken part in the discussions of the club during the year, are: The Rev. James J. Mahoney, S.J., The Rev. A. J. Kelly, S.J., Mr. Ernest V. McClear, S.J., Mr. John D. McKian, and Mr. Edward Sutfin.

THE

GEORGE MASEK has the reputation of being the most thorough classical scholar on the various camps of the University. It is undoubtedly his thorough knowledge of the learning and language of the ancient world that has obtained him the position of president of this select group.

The Classical Club gives Loyola students an opportunity to become more familiar with ancient civilizations. The club meets monthly to discuss the social aspects of Roman and Grecian life, which form such an important background for the work taken in the classroom.

Papers and discussions have one point in common: the tying-up of the habits and customs of today with those of the ancient peoples. They weave a real story of a real world in the past. They show the good and, to make it real, they show the bad, but above all, they show the ancient in his true light.

Moderator of the club is Mr. John Melchior, assistant professor of classical languages. This year George Masek, Arts senior, was president and Charles Nesbitt, Arts senior, secretary. The Reverend John J. Mertz, S.J., chairman of the Department of Classical Languages, has always taken an active part in the affairs of the club and was ever wont to lend interest to the discussion. Under the leadership of these men and spurred on by the extreme interest of such students as Richard Garvey, Arts senior, James Cutler, John Devaney, John Felten, and John Lyons, Arts juniors, the club has had a most successful year.

In line with the subject matter of the discussions, many of the meetings were held in the evening, and refreshments served. Speakers both from the faculty of the University and from outside sources were secured to address the club. To further stimulate interest, joint meetings were held with the Classical clubs of Mundelein College and De Paul University.

DR. MOGILNITSKY shows the president of the Economic Seminar, Charles Mackey, how to interpret a question that has arisen during the discussions of the club.

The Economics Seminar, instituted by Doctor Theodosi Mogilnitsky, associate professor of Economics, in the fall of this year, presents to the students of the Lake Shore Campus an opportunity to apply their knowledge of economic principles to contemporary problems. At each meeting a paper is presented by one of the members, and a discussion follows in which all are invited to participate. The student chooses a subject and voluntarily offers to prepare his material. The other members are informed of the subject chosen that they may be prepared for the discussion.

Moderator of the Seminar this year was Doctor Mogilnitsky. Student officers were Charles Mackey and John Hayes, Commerce seniors, president and secretary, respectively.

Among the papers given this year were "The Economic Aspects of Corporate Saving", by Charles Mackey; "The International Effects of the Influx of Fascist Nations into South American Trade," by Florent Verhulst; a practical proposal by Peter Conway for the realization of the ethical doctrine of the living wage in our modern economic system; "The Nature of Capital and Income," given by John Hayes and George Clark, Commerce seniors; and an analysis of the radio industry by Jack Dahme, Commerce senior.

The year's activities ended with a social function at a nearby hotel. The arrangements were made by Peter Conway.

THE ANNUAL BANQUET of the Seminar was attended by all the members. Attending the banquet and included in this picture are Dr. Mogilnitsky, Jasiel, Hayes, McCourt, Verhulst, Marotta, Mackey, Peter Conway, James Conway, and Dr. Flatley.

THE FRENCH CLUB

BOB BREMER has been selected as President of the French Club not only because of his proficiency at languages but also because of his executive ability. He has capably fulfilled the demands placed upon him by the management of this organization.

High among the more active groups of Loyola stands the French Club, Le Cercle Francais. The purpose of the club is to supplement the knowledge of the French language with a knowledge of the French people, of their history, traditions, and life, and to make practical use of the advances made in class. Thus the student of French is introduced to the social cultural, and intellectual aspects of French life in the freedom of a social gathering. Regular meetings of the club are given over to the study of French life by means of prepared papers, by free discussions and criticism. Works of art and literature and scientific advances made in France are studied.

This year the club's moderator, Mr. John Martin, instructor in French, and the officers, Robert Bremer, president, and Jack O'Connor, secretary-treasurer, led the organization through a colorful series of activities. Part of the year's program was given to the reproduction of a copy of the French life. Motion pictures of France and French people were shown. Joint meetings were held with the French club of neighboring Mundelein College, Les D'Arciennes, which were of a lighter vein and more social, the conversation being conducted almost entirely in French. Needless to say, such meetings proved very popular. The two clubs co-staged a marionette show during November, which was a huge success. The active year of Le Cercle Francais closed with its annual banquet—a dinner of French food in a French restaurant with French conversation.

BRANDEIS COMPETITION

BILL LAMEY AND RAY VONISH,
winners of the competition. Right, scene of the finals.

Student interest in the Law School's proudest tradition, the Brandeis Competition, was this year, in both day and evening divisions, even more active and satisfying than it has traditionally been. Supervision of the year's activities was in the hands of the student board, composed of Mr. Fred Brandstrater, Mr. Philip Collias and Mr. Raymond Vonesh, counselled by Professor John J. Waldron.

The Senior argument was held on the evening of Wednesday, November 9, 1938, in the library of the Law School. Mr. Phillip Collias and Mr. John McKenzie were opposed to Mr. William Lamey and Mr. Raymond Vonesh, on a question involving the right of recovery of money paid to discharge a supposedly valid mortgage on real estate. Judges John M. O'Connor, Ross M. Rall and Joseph Burke presided and gave their decision to the Lamey-Vonesh team.

In the Freshman and Junior sections of the competition, wider interest this year entailed a considerably longer program of arguments and the completion of the schedule consumed the remainder of the first semester. The character of the work displayed, both in research and preparation of briefs and in oral argument, was especially encouraging, and the conviction is stronger than ever that the Brandeis Competition is providing an opportunity for experience in appellate court practice and argument which it is impossible elsewhere to obtain under circumstances so closely approximating appellate procedure as the lawyer meets it in his actual practice.

The Law School wishes to express its thanks to its graduates, former Brandeis competitors and now practicing lawyers, who have served as judges of the Freshman and Junior arguments. The measure of experience and training to be derived from participation in Brandeis work is dependent, very directly, upon the skillfulness of the judges in questioning the student arguing before them and in compelling him to support his case against an effective and well-directed attack.

At the close of the arguments this year the Brandeis Board published a ranking of student competitors based upon the scores given each student by the judges in their balloting. In accordance with the new rules promulgated by the student board, competitors in the Senior argument will be chosen on the basis of this standing. Other changes in the rules governing competition are the reduction of arguments from two to one a year, made necessary by the larger number of students participating; the provision for the conduct of the default argument; the scheduling of the Senior argument in the first quarter of the school year, Junior argument in the second quarter, and the Freshman argument in the third quarter, with the final quarter devoted to a preparation of statistics by the board, the revision of the rules and the selection of the student board for the succeeding year.

MOOT COURT

The prime reason for the increased interest in the Moot Court Competition in recent years has been the timeliness of the questions argued. The question for this year—the constitutionality of taxation of income from state and municipal bonds by the Federal government—could not have been more timely.

The Loyola team, composed of three senior students, Miss Eva Charles, Mr. William Lamey and Mr. John McKenzie, in both the first and final round, argued against the constitutionality of such legislation. In the first round held on January 13, 1939 the Loyola team opposed a team from the University of Illinois Law School. The judges, Mr. Edward C. Austin, Judge Harry M. Fisher and Mr. William H. King, Jr., gave Loyola the decision.

On March 10, 1939 the final round, in which Loyola was opposed to Northwestern University, was held. The judges' decision went to Northwestern by a score of 18.65 to 17.35 (out of a possible 20 points). Members of both teams received the compliments of the judges for the effectiveness of their argument and the impressiveness of their presentation. It is interesting to note that the United States Supreme Court, in a significant decision handed down a few days after the conclusion of the final round, upheld, in effect the constitutionality of the legislation involved in this year's argument. In this there is certainly implicit a compliment to the Bar Association Committee responsible for the choice of the question for the Competition.

Mr. Lamey received the State Bar Association award for the presentation evincing the most thorough research, and Mr. McKenzie the award for most effective answering of questions proposed by the judges in the course of the argument.

ROG SLATTERY achieved the presidency of this organization which is devoted to the furthering of Loyola spirit as a recognition of the leadership he had already evidenced in this line.

Most active of all Lake Shore Campus clubs is the Loyola Green Circle, organized by Ralph Swanson in 1934 with the specific purpose of fostering school spirit by lending organized support to student activities and undertakings. Membership in the Green Circle has become an honor and a job.

The club began this year by making a survey of activities, found that what most activities needed was enthusiasm and push, and offered its publicity services and personal support whenever called upon. Giving assistance to the Sodality in promoting the inter-class football games was the next enterprise of the club. Gold footballs were awarded to each member of the winning team. Biggest single undertaking and achievement this year was again the complete handling and furnishing of ushers at the home basketball games. Green Circle ushers are regularly called upon by the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences to serve at school affairs. Later in the year, after Green Circle member Marty O'Shaughnessy had effected a marked increase in attendance at Loyola swim meets by inviting Mundelein girls, a similar suggestion was made for the basketball games. Even in the worst of weather, the results were terrific.

In no small way responsible for the Green Circle's success this year was its president Roger Slattery, who was constantly thinking up and promoting new ideas and projects for the club. Ably assisting Slattery was Charles Nesbitt, secretary, who proved dependable and thorough in putting ideas into effect. Outstanding in the support of the club this year were its other officers, Bob Birren and Bob Schultz.

The mid-year election of officers, which took place at one of the most memorable dinners of the club's history, saw the former treasurer and outstanding member of the club, Edward Britt, chosen to succeed Slattery.

RICHARD GARVEY President
FRANK KNOLL Secretary

The St. Thomas More Legal Club, established on the Lake Shore Campus a year ago, continued to function efficiently during the past year. Founded to satisfy a long felt need, the Legal Club this year set about accomplishing certain objectives in line with the reason for its existence.

This club was founded to offer the pre-legal student an opportunity to come into contact with men who are already in the law profession and who are thus capable of giving a better insight into the nature and requirements of that profession. Therefore in order to fill this need, the St. Thomas More Club invited numerous speakers to address its members. The speakers were mostly lawyers, and were of three types: first, practising attorneys; second, teachers in law schools; and third, students who are at present seeking a law degree. It was felt that in this way the prospective lawyer could see his future from the best possible vantage points.

Extremely active in this program were Mr. John Hayes, instructor in the School of Law, Richard Garvey, Arts senior, who was elected president early in the year, and Frank Knoll, Art junior, secretary. Among the speakers this year were Mr. John Fitzgerald, Dean of the School of Law, Mr. Robert Martineau, a practising attorney, and Mr. Fred Brandstrader, instructor in speech and moderator of the Cudahy Debating Forum. Special mention should be made of Edward Maciejewski, Arts senior, and William Janik, Commerce Junior, who served as a committee to procure these speakers for the club.

WOMEN'S MEDICAL CLUB

Founded in 1934, the Women's Medical Club has made rapid strides toward the high goal that its founder set up for it; namely, an active place for women in Medicine. This year under the leadership of Miss Blanche McIlvaine, several new projects were undertaken besides the numerous papers that were submitted by the members, and delivered before the other members. Various experiments were undertaken through which a keener insight into the various fields of medicine was obtained. This club has been a revelation to the Loyola Medical School because it has proved that women can and do undertake the endeavors which for so many years have been reserved for men. Through their active participation in the intricate discoveries in the field of medicine these women have made a name for themselves in the annals of the Loyola Medical School, and have set up a precedent which should attract many more women who have chosen this honorable profession for their life's work.

Miss McIlvaine and her workers are to be congratulated for their whole hearted cooperation in making the Women's Medical Affiliate one of the most active clubs in the University.

MISS BLANCHE McILVAINE, who heads this organization of women interested in the Medical Profession, has, through her ability, enabled them to enjoy an interesting and successful year.

THE UNIVERSITY CLUB

New this year on the Lake Shore Campus is the University Club, founded last fall by a group of spirited Arts sophomores. The University Club is a non-fraternity, social organization which has the unique purpose of banding together those students who, for whatever reasons they might have, are not members of fraternities, but who are desirous of acquiring some social affiliation. The specific aims of the club are to make non-fraternity men on the Lake Shore Campus more "Loyola conscious" by enabling them to share in the work of a "Loyola-centered" organization; to encourage school activities and to create a deeper school spirit; and to provide its members with a means of making their social activities a part of their college life.

Thomas Koerner, Arts Sophomore, was elected first president of the organization. To him and the other officers must go much of the credit for the club's successful first year. Under their capable leadership the club systematically set about the process of establishing itself. With the work of organizing completed, the club commenced to work ardently toward the realization of its specifically-stated ends.

Most important of all, the club pledged itself to support every Loyola activity and to put itself solidly behind all school undertakings. It held several informal dances in the student lounge, secured guest speakers to address the club members on topics of current interest. In the second semester it held smokers for prospective pledges and took in new members. The organization can well be proud of its intramural athletic team which looms as winner of the intramural sweepstakes.

KOERNER AND LINDSAY, head men in this new organization, consider a list of activities for the year.

MONOGRAM CLUB

OFFICERS

WILLIAM O'BRIEN	President
GEORGE HOGAN	Vice-President
EUGENE DUBAY	Secretary
JACK HAYES	Treasurer

For the first time in the history of the Monogram Club the members doffed their attractive sweaters, rolled up their sleeves, and undertook an active program.

The club began this year by increasing the scope of membership to all major and minor letter winners. This made the Monogram Club a group of athletes representative of all university sports: basketball, track, swimming, golf, tennis, cross country and intramural managers.

The most constructive step taken by the organization was the revision of the dilapidated constitution. The improved set of laws defined the aims and means of the club more clearly and explicitly, thereby directing the efforts of the club to more concrete achievements.

The club honored many of her own members when it sponsored the rally for the team before it left to play in the National tournament in New York. It was commonly agreed that this was the most spirited rally that the students have enjoyed in several years.

They turned their efforts toward giving credit to the exceptional track team when they sponsored the track dance. This successful affair featured a university dual meet followed by a free dance in the gymnasium.

At the close of the year the club conducted the informal initiation wherein the new members enjoyed meeting and knowing old alumni members who returned for the occasion. It is intended that this precedent will be made an annual custom.

BILL O'BRIEN has been elected president of the Monogram Club not only because of his athletic ability but also because of his executive talent and universal popularity.

To commemorate the senior monogram club members, a frame containing their pictures was hung in the lounge.

The officers were led by Bill O'Brien, president, whose aids were, George Hogan, Vice-President, Gene Dubay secretary, and Jack Hayes treasurer. The members from the basketball team were O'Brien, Kautz, Novak, Hogan, Hayes, and Driscoll. Track gave Wagener, Clark, Knoll, Elson, Barrett and Wendt. The swimming monogram members were O'Shaughnessy and Burke. From the tennis team came Hruby and Dubay. Birren, Koepke and Gibbons were members by virtue of their position as intramural managers.

THE REVEREND JOHN I. GRACE, S.J., (left), is chairman of the Athletic Board.

The Board of Control, the power behind the scenes as far as athletics is concerned, gave to Loyola this year a program that was greatly expanded in comparison with other years. Through this program there was a greater emphasis laid upon the minor sports. Swimming, formerly a minor, was raised to the dignity of a major sport.

Headed by Father Grace, the Board was made up of Mr. Sachs, the Varsity basketball coach and the Director of Athletics; Mr. Butzen, Frosh basketball coach; Mr. Wilson, track and swimming coach; and Mr. Heffernan, the boxing coach.

Through the work of Father Grace and Mr. Sachs, this year's basketball schedule was made up of the finest teams in the country. Appreciation of the great work that these men accomplished was shown by the large turnout at the Father and Son Banquet that was given in honor of the team. All of the guest speakers at the dinner were loud in their praise of the fine Christian example that all of the coaches had given to the students during the year. It was due to Mr. Sachs and the rest of the coaches that the men of Loyola were trained in sportsmanship as well as athletic prowess.

Great credit is also due to Coach Butzen because of the manner in which he took over the job of initiating the Frosh into the intricacies of the leather sphere. Mr. Butzen took over the job that was vacated by Marv Colen toward the middle of the season.

JERRY HEFFERNAN, (upper left), boxing instructor and former ring star is also a member of the Board.

One of the busiest men on the campus was Coach Al Wilson, who had to divide his time between the cross country, swimming, and varsity track. Mr. Wilson, a former Olympic athlete, has brought all of his athletic experience into play in turning out the finest teams that Loyola has had in many years.

Coach Heffernan has spent many afternoons in teaching Loyolans the art of self defense that is so necessary. The result of all this work was shown to the outsiders when the intramural boxing tournament was held in the early spring.

AL WILSON, the fourth member of the group, has acquired a reputation around Loyola for versatility, being both gym instructor and the coach of the cross country, swimming, and varsity track teams.

LEONARD D. SACHS, coach of the varsity basketball team and member of the Board, is seen reviewing the successful season at the Welcome banquet given to the team.

Mike Novak

This year The Ramblers completed one of the most successful seasons in the history of Loyola basketball, twenty-one successive victories and the only defeat in the game for the National Championship. A truly remarkable record. We can't blame them for finally losing a game. There was bound to be a let-down—a squad of eight boys with such limited substitution giving all they had every game. When at last their endurance was spent, the collapse came after the finish of one of the most difficult schedules in the basketball year.

Let us consider the team and its personnel. There is no need of going into detail regarding Mike Novak and "Wibs" Kautz; everyone recognized their ability. They were both selected on the All-American Team. When two boys from the same school make this team, they have to be good. This is what a New York sports writer wrote after seeing a certain game in Madison Square Garden, "You will live a long while before you see two such All-Americans on one team as Novak and Kautz."

We hear so much about Novak and Kautz that we sometimes think of Loyola as a two man team. This is a mistake, for without the other players Loyola could never have been the great team that achieved twenty-one successive victories.

Can we ever forget the fine defensive play of Bill O'Brien, his fast, accurate passing ability, and his coolness under pressure? He did a splendid job in feeding and making it possible for Kautz, Novak, and Hogan to score.

George Hogan was never the sensational type of player, but how often he came through in a pinch! Very few men could feed a pivot man as well as George. I shall never forget his fight and play, particularly during the National Tournament! He was a leader and a fighter and a representative Loyolan if there ever was one.

We cannot overlook George Wenskus, the sophomore flash. His was a tough assignment, working in with four seniors. He did a fine job. His work in the Chicago game was typical of the play that George exhibited throughout the year. He was a fine defensive man, a good shot, and his leadership ability was clearly demonstrated when the squad, by a unanimous vote, elected him to captain the Ramblers of 1939-40.

Jack Driscoll, the smallest man in collegiate basketball, was undoubtedly the equal of any man on the squad and gave a splendid exhibition of speed and all around ability in every game.

COACH SACHS addresses the basketball team just before the game. In the first row are Wens'us, Driscoll, Graham, Schell, and O'Brien. In the rear are Hofherr, Novak, Kautz and Hogan.

Joe Mande

Bob Hofherr

In the crucial game in Toledo, Kautz was able to play but a few minutes and Driscoll played the greater part of the game. The fans at Toledo are still talking about him. Remember the City College of New York game. Jack, with seconds remaining sank a basket nearly three-fourths the length of the floor.

We cannot overlook the "Gold Dust Twins," Vinny Graham and Ed Schell, two more sophomores. Improving with each game, at the end of the season they were splendid basketball players. Schell played a great part of the game against Long Island and was very much at home. I expect a great deal from him next season.

Vinny Graham is what coaches refer to as a competition player. He does not know the meaning of the word quit. I shall never forget the Michigan State game: three minutes to go and Loyola 8 points behind, a basket, a free throw and another basket by Graham, ten seconds to go and the score is tied, an overtime victory for Loyola. Thanks to that grand competitor, Vinny Graham.

They were all great,—I am proud of each and every one of them as a player and as a man.

REVIEWING THE SEASON

ONE OF THE MOST spectacular pictures of the season is this action shot from the St. John-Loyola game, at Madison Square Garden. This hotly contested game saw brilliant action throughout, and culminated in a victory for Loyola.

The Toledo Game.

Of all the Loyola teams coached by Len Sachs the 1939 Ramblers were no doubt the finest squad that he has ever produced. Lacking the advantages of a large team, Loyola made up in quality what it lacked in quantity. Beginning with its first game on December seventh, at the start of the basketball year, the team ran up an undefeated season of twenty-one games, meeting the best of the country, and bringing Loyola into the very center of the limelight of sports. When Loyola's squad finally turned in their uniforms, two All-Americans had been named from the Ramblers.

Much of the credit for our national reputation this year is directly due to players Mike Novak and Wilbur Kautz. They formed a nucleus for the machine that sped around them in pivot and block plays, matching in precision and ingenuity the speed, fast break, and rougher game of most of the opposition.

LOYOLA 67; ARKANSAS STATE 22.

The Ramblers made their debut of the season with Arkansas State. In this contest, "Wibs" Kautz led the team to a 67-22 victory, and aided considerably in running up a new all-time team scoring record by tying his personal record of 27 points for one game.

LOYOLA 56; COLUMBIA 24.

Columbia, now Loris College, followed Arkansas State to defeat in the next encounter. The Dubuque team, unable to furnish much opposition for the Ramblers, went down 56 to 24.

LOYOLA 50; NORTH DAKOTA 32.

One of the greatest basketball promotions in the West this year was the 132nd Army "double-headers" with Loyola and DePaul as home teams against the nations best. The first of these games for Loyola was its meeting with North Dakota. Paced by Kautz and Hogan, the Ramblers played the entire game with a comfortable lead winding up with a 50 to 32 win.

LOYOLA 67; MILLIKIN 31.

The Sachsmen then returned to the Alumni Gym to tie their recently acquired scoring record in trouncing the Millikin five 67 to 31. Kautz fell two points short of his own record of 27 points.

LOYOLA 44; SOUTHERN METHODIST 31.

The holiday season saw the Ramblers back into action in another double-header against Southern Methodist, southern conference champions. Coach Sachs, at the end of the season, called the Mustangs the best coached team of the year. Leading at the half by a mere 23 to 22 margin, the boys saw they had a tough job on their hands. Hogan and Novak finally got the team ahead, ending the game with a 44 to 31 lead.

LOYOLA 35; CHICAGO 28.

It was the sensational George Wenskus who provided the spark as the Ramblers snapped a three year losing streak in defeating the Midway men 35 to 28. Close guarding of Kautz held him to a low of 13 points, but O'Brien and Hogan and Wenskus kept the ball going in and around Novak for the sixth straight victory of the season.

The North Dakota Game.

LOYOLA 46; MICHIGAN STATE 44.

One of the greatest thrillers staged at the Armory was the Loyola-Michigan State game in which Kautz's ten-second basket gave the Ramblers a 46 to 44 win. The team was unable to pull away in the first half as the Michigan team matched them basket for basket. The half ended in a 21-21 deadlock. With three minutes left to play State led 38 to 30. Sensational ball by Graham, Wenskus, and Novak brought the game into an overtime. Wenskus then scored two baskets and Kautz broke through for the winning shot.

The Millikin Game.

LOYOLA 33; SANTA CLARA 31.

Recovering from the Michigan State tussle, the Ramblers met the fast, colorful Santa Clara quintet at the gym. The razzle-dazzle style of the Broncos with their fast breaks and one-hand shots forced the Ramblers almost to the point of exhaustion, and kept the fans up on their feet throughout most of the game. The Ramblers proved themselves to be a superb ball club. The intelligent direction and accurate passing of O'Brien, the great defensive work of Novak, and the teamwork of Hogan and Wenskus carried Loyola on to another victory by a score of 33 to 31.

The Chicago Game.

LOYOLA 46; DRAKE 32.

Trailing 20-17 at the half before a hostile Des Moines crowd, the Loyola cagers recovered in the second frame and drove to an eventual triumph over a strong Drake team, 46 to 32. Mike Novak, the center of defense, was top point man with 16 points.

LOYOLA 51; VILLANOVA 32.

Returning to the armory, the Ramblers routed Villanova University 51-32 in what was termed by the local sports writers as "the Sachsmen's big test." All-Americans Kautz and Novak with 15 points apiece paced the Loyola attack before a capacity crowd of 5,500. In all, the game slightly resembled a grid contest, 23 personals and 3 technicals being called on the visitors.

LOYOLA 37; AUGUSTANA 29.

Just before the semester examinations the Ramblers journeyed to Rock Island, Illinois, to take the Augustana College quintet into camp by the score of 37 to 29. Kautz was high scorer with 18 points.

The Southern Methodist Game.

The Michigan State Game.

LOYOLA 37; ALUMNI 28.

The varsity squad returned home to meet an alumni team composed of all-time Rambler greats such as former All-Americans Charlie Murphy, Dick Butzen, and Marv Colen. Before a cheering crowd the Varsity defeated the Alumni 37 to 28. Sophomore Vinny Graham led the varsity in scoring while Marv Colen took top scoring honors with five baskets and one free throw.

LOYOLA 34; DRAKE 23.

The Ramblers then made it thirteen in a row and twenty straight at home when they took the powerful Drake University team by a score of 34 to 23. At the half Drake led by a score of 15 to 14, but in the beginning of the second period Kautz and Novak put the local cagers out in front and from then on they never relinquished the lead.

LOYOLA 52; CITY COLLEGE OF NEW YORK 27.

Returning to the armory for the last time this season the Ramblers trounced the famed City College of New York quintet by the score of 52 to 27. By their wonderful performance the Sachsmen strengthened their claim for national recognition. Big Mike Noval led the scoring with six baskets and five free throws and was the mainstay of the Rambler attack throughout the entire game. Nat Holman, coach of the New York team and one of basketball's all-time greats, said that Novak was the best center he has seen this season and that the Loyola team was on an equal footing with any eastern quintet.

LOYOLA 36; DEPAUL 26.

The highlight of the past season was the Loyola-DePaul game in which the C.Y.O. trophy was at stake. The Ramblers defeated the famed Blue Demons of DePaul by a score of 36 to 26 in a game marked by fouls and rough play. By conquering DePaul for the third straight year the Ramblers took permanent possession of the C.Y.O. trophy emblematic of the state Catholic college championship. George Hogan captured top scoring honors by garnering 13 points.

LOYOLA 58; ST. THOMAS 36.

After a suspected let-down from the DePaul tussle the Loyola cagers made it sixteen in a row by defeating St. Thomas college 58 to 36. It was a game in which the regulars saw very little action, for Coach Sachs frequently substituted the other players. Highlight of the evening was the sensational play of Bob Hofherr.

LOYOLA 44; GEORGE WASHINGTON 33.

Remembering last year's game against George Washington University, the Ramblers played heads-up ball all the way to defeat the Colonials 44-33. Washington will be remembered as a team of a high sportsmanship caliber.

LOYOLA 52; CUMBERLAND 39.

Following the George Washington game, the Ramblers headed south to play a team made up of all the best players from the vicinity of Cumberland Maryland. Putting on one of the greatest exhibitions of the year the Ramblers swamped the All-Star team by the score of 52 to 39. This game was marked by the great passing of Hogan and O'Brien, along with the high scoring of Kautz and Big Mike.

LOYOLA 51; TOLEDO 38.

Playing on a home and home basis with Toledo University, Loyola journeyed east to take Toledo's great team by the score of 51 to 38. The Toledoites were so overcome by the swift plays that centered around Novak that they were helpless to stop the Sachsmen.

LOYOLA 50; TOLEDO 46.

In the Toledo game at Loyola the Ramblers were given a tougher battle. Kautz broke through in the second half to show the crowd that he was clearly better than the famed Chuekovits when it came to all around playing ability. However it was thanks to the great play of the whole team that Loyola was ahead at the end of the game by the score of 50 to 46.

LOYOLA 51; ST. JOHN'S 46.

It was then on to the National Championship Tournament—Loyola was to meet the greatest team of its season, St. Johns. In spite of the loss that Loyola incurred at the hands of Long Island, there is no doubt that St. Johns were the best of all the opponents Loyola faced during the year. The spectacular play of Mike Novak during this game left the New York crowd breathless. Kautz played one of the fastest games of his career. The whole team was at its best.

LONG ISLAND 44; LOYOLA 32.

It was the last game of the season that broke Loyola's winning streak. When the Ramblers walked out onto the floor of Madison Square Garden in the final game of the National Championship Tournament, it was not the same team that had met St. Johns, City College, Southern Methodist, Villanova, Santa Clara, and others. Loyola obviously was not playing its best game. Long Island made seventeen baskets and ten out of twelve free throws. Loyola made fifteen baskets and missed eleven out of thirteen free throws. Had Loyola played its regular game, perhaps the Ramblers would not have won, but the score would not have been 44-32.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

Handicapped by inexperience and a lack of sufficient material, Loyola's freshman basketball team fought through the season with a spirit that was deserving of better things. Although their season's record of two won and four lost is far from enviable, it does not give an adequate or complete picture of the drive and spirit which were so characteristic of the 1939 freshman team. With a squad of only seven men, including the manager, the team was forced to play out their schedule of six games without the reserves which are so necessary for a really outstanding team.

In the opening game of the season Loyola's greenmen chalked up their first win of the year against one of their traditional rivals, the neophytes from Armour Tech. In a tight and hotly contested battle Loyola came out on the long end of a 26 to 18 score. Starring for Loyola was lanky Augie Durso, one of the mainstays of the team throughout the season, whose effective work under the basket contributed more than anything else to a Loyola victory.

Next on the list of freshman opponents were the DePaul Blue Demons, who gave the greenmen their worst drubbing of the year by a tally of 32 to 16. Outstanding factor in the DePaul victory was their greater experience and this more than anything else made the game a losing battle for the Loyolans.

The DePaul contest was followed by a bitterly fought battle with the famed Collegians, the former A.A.U. champs. Loyola surprised their more experienced opponents by jumping out into an 8 to 0 lead but the Collegians staged an uphill fight to take the lead at the half and to win going away. The frosh played with their characteristic spirit, but were up against a veteran aggregation that had played together for a long time.

In the St. Sabina game a week later the freshmen again succumbed to superior opposition, but only after extending their larger opponents to the utmost before they eventually came in on the short end of a 36 to 28 score. Again the height of Durso, together with the speed of flashy Jim Roberts, was one of the greatest factors in keeping the greenies in the game all the way.

They next met the freshmen from Armour Tech in a return engagement, again defeating their north side neighbors by a score of 34 to 21. The frosh offensive which had long been threatening to show the results of long periods of practice finally broke loose and the Ramblers rolled up their largest score of the season. Starring in this victory were Bob Van Heule, Bruno Krzeminski, and Durso.

The final game of the season took place in the St. Sabina tourney, to which the frosh were invited because of their status as defending champs. Striving to live up to advance notices, the frosh engaged in a tight, closely contested battle with a tall, fast Swift & Co. team, but the latter's height advantage gave them the game by a 21 to 18 score.

Outstanding courtman for the frosh basketeers throughout the season was tall Augie Durso. A hook-shot artist and high point man of the team, Augie was especially valuable for his dependable floor play on the pivot line and his work under the basket.

Jim Roberts, speedy little forward, also developed into one of the steadiest and most capable ball handlers on the squad. Not noted for his scoring ability, Jim was nevertheless invaluable for his flashy floor play and for his ability to set up successful scoring plays for his teammates. This more than anything else marks Jim as future varsity material.

Bob Van Heule, Robert's running mate at forward, was the outstanding team player on the squad. His height advantage helped in getting the ball on rebounds and his coolness in the stress of a tight game made him a very valuable man to the freshman team. He was especially adept in handling the ball and with Durso helped control the sphere under the basket.

Small but shifty, Bruno Krzeminski rapidly developed into one of the most capable players on the squad. His fighting spirit and his ability to hit the basket made him one of the Frosh's most consistent floormen and most capable sharpshooters.

The other guard position was capably handled by Ted Cornell, who alternated at the post with Pat Mone. Although neither of these was particularly flashy, both were long on dependability and steadiness and rounded out a well-balanced team.

Last but not least and of the the most dependable men on the squad was Bill Duncan, hard working player-manager, to whom the team owed a great deal of the success that it had. Filling in at any position and on hand at all of the practice scrimmages to see to it that the equipment was ready and to take a hand in the practice, Bill was the most valuable man to his team.

Among others that were with the squad at various times during the year, but who were prevented from consistent competition by scholastic work or other things, were Ira Hartnett, former Loyola Academy star, Bill Ryan, one of the most promising of the frosh players, Bill Midwood, Charley Moore, and Jerry Donohue.

All of these players will be promising material for the varsity squad next year. With a year of experience and hard work behind them, they should be able to carry on the tradition of great varsity teams.

JERRY DONOGHUE, one of the new prospects, takes a free throw. He and his teammates provide the material for next years varsity squad.

THE CROSS

PAUL WAGENER, (extreme left), captain of the cross-country squad.

COACH WILSON chalking up another victory.

Loyola's Cross Country team this year has begun to show more than ever that Coach Wilson's efforts have not been in vain. The team this year has had the most successful season that Loyola has ever enjoyed. Led by Captain Paul Wagener and freshman Max Lenover the harriers eliminated a host of talented teams from the victory column.

The Ramblers were undefeated in dual competition, and with a more or less inexperienced team had a season total of twelve victories and four defeats.

The first of the dual meets showed the timber of the team when they defeated powerful Milwaukee State Teachers by the score of $24\frac{1}{2}$ to $30\frac{1}{2}$. It was also in this meet that Loyola was given its first view of the "Flying Canadian" Max Lenover.

This victory was followed by others over the University of Chicago, 17 to 38; Wheaton College, 21 to 34; and Eastern Illinois Teachers, 25 to 30. Inexperience began to show through however when the team entered a meet with several other teams and were forced to bow to the unbeatable team from Wisconsin 42 to 17.

In the annual Invitational Cross Country Run, the harriers again were forced to bow to the superiority of Notre Dame and Illinois State Normal, but were able to save fourth place in the large field that entered the competition.

In a return meet with Milwaukee State Teachers' the Ramblers again humbled their opponents 22 to 33. Chicago University followed through with a perfect imitation of State Teachers by bowing to Loyola 15 to 44. Illinois State Normal in their second meeting with Loyola again showed their superior strength by the score of 18 to 40.

In rapid succession the Ramblers finished off the following teams: Eastern Illinois State Teachers, 26 to 29; Wheaton, 21 to 34; and Monmouth College, 15 to 41.

Special credit for the season should be given to Chuck Beauregard, arts sophomore, and to Dan Howe, Ed Reidy, and Norb Essig, all freshmen who gave valuable assistance all during the year.

The Ramblers had two post season meets with Macomb Teachers, and kept their average up by defeating them twice by the scores of 18 to 40, and 19 to 36. This was the climax of the most successful season that any Cross Country Team from Loyola has enjoyed in many a year.

VARSITY TRACK

LONG GEORGE CLARK steps out in practice.

KNOLL, up and over.

Coming as a climax to one of the most successful seasons that Loyola has ever had in the field of athletics, the track team, has come through with a team that has claims for national honors at the end of the year. Long an underdog in cinder competition, the speedsters are at last beginning to show that the trust their coach Alex Wilson has always had in them is not without foundation. Coach Wilson has taken the best of the veterans and moulded them together with those greenmen who have shown such brilliant promise this year.

Stories of the courage of some of the men that have taken part in meets so far this year have come back to the students to give them a greater admiration for the spirit of the team than for the victories that have been won. Men that were sick the day before meets have come out and called upon their courage alone to finish ahead of their opponents; men that ordinarily should have been under the care of a doctor have said nothing and gone out on the track and earned victories for the school. Such stories as these have come to the attention of the students, not from the members of the team, but from those who were close and were able to find them out only after the races had been won. Such courage as this could not go unrewarded; and to prove that it has not gone unrewarded, it is only necessary to see the trophy case which now has been filled to the limit by the efforts of these men.

Wilsonmen this year have earned recognition from schools that had formerly looked upon Loyola as merely a practice team. Loyola was invited to take part in the relays that are gaining so much popularity in the west and the states that have weather suitable for this sport the year round.

The most notable of these relays which they attended was the Butler Relays at Butler University. The thinclads were able to garner first place in the medley relay and second in the sprint relay. By virtue of these victories they were invited to the Texas Relays at Austin where they placed second in the sprint relays. Worthy of mention is the remarkable running of Max Lenover. The first man in the relay team was boxed so that he lost almost sixty yards. The next two runners were able to pick up little of the distance but Max Lenover staged one of the most spectacular sprints ever seen. He ran the half mile just short of the world's record losing out only by a yard.

The veterans that made up the backbone of the team were Bill Elson, captain George Clark, and Bud Knoll. The practice that they have had in the past showed in their efforts on the track.

The newcomers on the squad show signs of being Olympic material in a few short years. Outstanding is the sensational freshman Max Lenover. Max left his home in Canada to run with the Wilsonmen, and has been setting new records ever since he came here. At the beginning of the year he put on an exhibition for some of the graduates who had come to see whether this year's team had ability enough to uphold the records set by the former teams. This turned out to be one of the fastest exhibitions that has ever been seen in these parts. Paced at different intervals during the race Lenover turned on the heat and set a new record for the half mile on the indoor track.

This year Lenover added still another record to his already impressive list. In the annual Wilson Invitational Mile Run he led a field of contestants a gruelling pace to break the record set last year by twenty seconds. It is doubtful that anyone but Max himself will ever break this record.

Another underclassman sensation is Tom Layden, the former holder of the record for the Wilson Mile that is run annually. Tom ran the three-quarters in the medley relays this year, performing remarkably well in the Butler and Illinois Relays.

The third distance man on the medley team was freshman Ed Reidy, former Ignatius star half-miler, and winner of the Catholic League title last year. Bill Elson ran regularly as the fourth man of the medley squad, as sprint man. The task of getting a lead is the job of the sprint man, and Bill seldom gave Coach Wilson cause to worry.

Dan Howe and Charlie Beaugerard alternated on the sprint relay squad that did so well this season. Dan is a product of Loyola Academy where last year he gained distinction in winning the National Catholic 440 title last year at Notre Dame. Dan has gained the name of "Whiffle Bird" by reason of his style. His head bobs from side to side as he extends himself. It is much more natural to see Beau running than to see him walking, since he does most of his practicing on the way to classes.

Frank Knoll has had a reputation on the track squad for dependability. He has been a member of the squad three years now in the capacity of pole-vaulter.

ELSON AND REIDY (below) get off to a fast start in practice.

When the name of George Clark is mentioned, the memories that are recalled are those of a giant of man throwing himself over the hurdles a mile a minute. The fact that he was made captain of the greatest team that Loyola has had in years shows how much the team thinks of him. No better leader could have been found than this tall specimen of athletic ability. One of the steadiest of all the pointgetters, he is counted on to bring home the bacon this year as soon as he is through with his comprehensives.

Another veteran is Paul Wagener. The men that have raced against Paul have always wondered where he got energy to finish those distance runs. The answer to this could be found in watching the manner in which he is always practicing. Paul has well merited the name "Tarzan" since his powerful shoulders have so often carried the hopes of the team.

Although the outdoor season has not yet begun at press time, a word about the rest of the team is necessary here. There are sophomores Graham and Kiely in the high jump. Graham jumped slightly over six feet last year and will certainly go higher this year. He also competes in the broad jump. George Kiely placed in the only meet he competed in this season, and with further experience should add quite a few points to the outdoor season. During the coming outdoor competition, Tony Dirksen will throw the shot for Loyola, Ed Britt the discus, Vinny Graham the javelin.

If the meets so far this year are any criterion Loyola should have its most successful season. Congratulations are always due a coach who has turned in a good job, and we hastened to add our congratulations to the mounting acclaim. Loyola is on the upgrade on the track and mainly through the efforts of Coach Alex Wilson.

VARSITY SWIMMING

This year the Loyola Varsity Swimmers set a new Loyola record by winning eight meets during the season. This successful season was partially due to the fact that the Reverend John I. Grace, S.J., elevated swimming to the rank of a major sport.

In the real sense, the promotion given to swimming is confirmation of the coaching of Alex Wilson. This is his seventh year directing the team, and during this period he has produced expert swimmers and fine men. The quality of his coaching is exemplified by the fact that the first seven scorers of this years team have been developed entirely by Coach Wilson. He will bring forth the potentialities of the lower ranking men to the point where they can score on future teams. Through his expert tutelage he improves the individual swimmers and maintains the standard of his teams.

In winning eight meets and losing two, the team compiled the best average they have had in five years, and second highest since the inauguration of the sport in 1930. Some of the victories were scored against Armour, Bradley, North Central, Illinois College, and other leading Midwestern schools. The team lost when taking on undefeated southern invaders from Kentucky State. A second defeat was suffered when they traveled north to meet Milwaukee State.

The outstanding man on the squad in many respects is Captain Marty O'Shaughnessy, Arts Junior. He is the only man in the history of the school to hold the captaincy in his sophomore year, and he has retained the office this year as well. The squad does well to elect him captain, for he exerts remarkable influence on his mates. They profit, not only by his expert example, but also because he prods them all to practice regularly encourages them on their improvement.

O'Shaughnessy swims backstroke in the 100 yard distance, and takes the backstroke leg on the medley relay team. This was his best season thus far, for only two opponent teams captured first place in the backstroke event.

Max Shapiro, Dental school senior, completed four years of service. Despite the inconvenience of the trip from the Dental school to the north side daily for practice Max appeared regularly and went through his paces. The combination of his swimming feats and his intramural work establish him as the outstanding contribution of the Dental school to Loyola athletics. Max had the gruelling task of swimming free style in the fifty, hundred, and sprint relay events. A year ago he was the highest scorer on the team, and this time he finished in fourth place with 47 points.

Another veteran who performed well in the breast-stroke is Al Burke, Arts Junior. Al has had a number of years of tank experience, and under the instruction of Coach Wilson is still improving his time. Throughout the entire season Al splashed in ahead of Loyola's opponents in all but two meets.

The other star in the breaststroke division is Warren Matt, Arts sophomore. This underclassman began his swimming career here at Loyola two years ago, and all of his ability may be attributed directly to Coach Wilson. Mr. Wilson concerning this says, "Matt has developed more rapidly than any member of the team". This year he was so efficient that he was beaten only in the meet with University of Kentucky. His seasons total is 48 to place him third in the scoring.

Another sophomore star who garnered 59 points and next to the top in seasons total points is Ray Dougherty, of the Arts campus. Dougherty is the team diver, and also swims the free style in the sprint and medley relay events. This is his sixth year of work under Coach Wilson for he prefaced his university career by four seasons in Loyola Academy.

A sensational sprint star this year stole all the glory. Bob Carroll, Arts Freshman, walked off with 83 individual points and high scoring honors for the team. He is another example of the coaching prowess of Mr. Wilson, who handled him for four previous years in Loyola Academy. Carroll performed in the fifty and hundred yard free style events, as well anchoring the free style relay team.

Ebby Corboy, sophomore from the North Side campus, represented Loyola in the backstroke events. Possessed of a huge, ideal frame for a swimmer, Ebby takes advantage of his natural ability to turn in sterling performances.

The grind in the two hundred yard marathon was adequately handled by Bob McKeever and Bus Moore. To stand up under the tremendous strain of this long distance, these men must practice long and diligently. McKeever and Moore kept in condition and were able to take a great many of first places before the season was out.

The other men who round out the natators are Warren McNeil, free style artist, Bill McNulty and Bill Sisson of the breaststroke division, and Bob Moorhead, a diver.

The Rambler debut was made against Armour Tech whom they defeated by the score of 46-20. The Ramblers scored every first place except the one in the two hundred yard free style. In his first intercollegiate meet Bob Carroll led the team scoring with 12 points.

The second meet brought North Central, and much stiffer competition, which they nosed out by 37-29. The veteran Shapiro flashed into his old form to garner two firsts and one second place for a very fruitful day.

The Wilsonmen made it three straight when they paddled in ahead of George Williams College 41-25. By scoring 10 points Bob Carroll again led the assault in which Loyola took six out of eight events.

The Milwaukee Teachers College blotted the undefeated record of the Ramblers when they defeated them by the score of 38-28. In spite of the loss Warren Matt shone in the breaststroke event which he swam in the amazing time of 1:11.4. The medley relay team also brought their light from under the proverbial bushel, when O'Shaughnessy, Matt and Dougherty went through the 150 yard distance in 1:28.8, only one second more than the record.

The tankers wrecked the displeasure of this defeat upon Bradley Tech in their next contest. They downed Bradley by the overwhelming score of 36-22. They took the second victory of the year against North Central, this time emerging with a score of 40-26. In so doing they shattered two tank records. Matt now holds the breaststroke record of 1:12.4, and Henning of North Central the backstroke record of 1:3.7. Bob Carroll came in again with the high point honors by scoring ten.

The Ramblers were faced with a very heavy week end when they journeyed to DePauw and then returned to oppose Kentucky the following night. Ebby Corboy stood up best under the strain and led the onslaught against DePauw which defeated them 46-38. The next night, however, took its toll from the Ramblers record for they were not able to turn back Kentucky, succumbing 45-21. Ebby Corboy maintained his fast pace and came through with the backstroke event in the time of 1:10.1. Bob McKeever also performed better than the rest to take the 200 yard free style event.

The largest crowd that the Alumni gymnasium has ever attracted to a swimming event was present to see the Maroon and Gold against Illinois College, defending champions of the Little Nineteen Conference. The entire team rose to the occasion and the score 48-26, indicates the calibre of their performance. Those who were particularly effective against the downstate opponents were Dougherty, Carroll, Matt and Corboy.

The Loyola University team closed their season with a one-sided victory over George Williams. This was the last appearance of Max Shapiro and he made it a good one by winning in both free style sprints and then leading the victorious relay team. The Loyola swimmers were too well balanced for the opposition; they gathered an early lead of over ten points and then built it up as the meet progressed.

Major letters were given to swimmers this year for the first time. Those to receive them were: Matt, Shapiro, and Dougherty. The minor letter awards were to Burke, Corboy, McKeever and Capt. O'Shaughnessy. Bob Carroll merited numerals.

THE BEAUTY OF A JACK-KNIFE (upper right) is demonstrated by Ray Dougherty, Loyola's spectacular diver. Ray has won firsts in almost every meet in which he has participated.

BOB CARROLL (lower right) is one of the most unusual swimmers Loyola has had. He has amassed eighty-five points for the team, winning a place for himself as the high point man.

THE TENNIS TEAM

This year's tennis team has hopes of bettering its last season record of three victories and four defeats. With the capable aggregation of players under the coaching of Mr. Ernest V. McClear, S.J., there is no reason why this hope should not be fulfilled. Fifteen meets have already been scheduled for the six weeks season against some of the best competition in the country.

Some of the schools which the team will hold meets with this year are North Central College, Armour Tech, Lake Forest, and Beloit. Single meets with Kalamazoo, Detroit, Marquette, Wayne, Wheaton, and Williams have also been definitely dated. Details of a meet with Notre Dame are still pending.

Coach McClear is building this year's team around the three remaining stars of last year. These men, Hruby, Dubay, and Janik have all seen three years of play, and are highly dependable. They were members of last year's team, and also saw service on the great squad of 1937. To bolster his veteran material, Coach McClear must depend on John Healy, senior reserve player and hero of last year's victory over Detroit, Jack O'Connor, junior ace, and Roman Siemans, another junior prospect. Besides these men, the team will also be supported by ten or twelve freshman aspirants of, at present, unknown ability.

A probable ranking of material on this year's team would be: Dubay, Hruby, Janik, Healy, O'Connor or Siemans.

TOM KOERNER (upper left) gets ready for a long drive. The perfecting of form on the strokes is requisite to becoming a good player.

BOB LINDSAY (above) demonstrates the correct technique of the "follow through."

This year's golf team, according to all present indications, is one of the finest that has appeared within recent years. Since the matches are played late in the season, no actual playing data is available, but from the quality of the men who have appeared for practice, it is safe to predict that the team will enjoy a successful season. The competition among the newer members of the squad to outshine the veterans has fostered and developed a type of golf which will bring the team a string of victories. This team has the unique distinction of being almost entirely composed of underclassmen.

Captained by Gil Jorgenson, the team opened their practice season as soon as weather conditions permitted. Gil has also taken over the job of coaching the team, since at the present time they are without the services of a professional coach. He has also taken care of arranging the schedules, and performing other managerial duties. During the time that he does not devote to being the executive director of the team, he consistently breaks various course records. Under his direction the team has welded itself into a unit of almost professional ability. Rather than allow the members of the squad to spend all their time competing against each other in practise, he prefers that they take especial care to become more proficient on the various shots. As a consequence, the members are fast developing into polished linksmen.

Some of the outstanding players on this year's team are Smith, a Dental student, who has been assigned the position of number three man on the team and Limacher, who has been assigned number one position for his brilliant practice playing. In the first meet of the year, Limacher shot a seventy-six, after having gone all winter without any practise.

The reserves on the team are McErney, Lindsay, Waldron, and Koerner. These men have been showing great improvement in their game, and will be called upon to take the place of the regulars should any mishap occur.

THE GOLF TEAM

THE INTRAMURAL BOARD is composed of O'Shaughnessy, Cornell, Littig, Moore, Garner, Conroyd, Kiley, Sheehan, Schiavone, Gibbons, Driscoll.

JACK DRISCOLL piloted the I-M board this year through one of its most successful seasons.

Intramural sports play a big part in the student's life at Loyola. Varsity competition is reserved for those few who excel in the several fields, but the whole school is enabled to take part in the variegated intramural program.

This year, the I-M Board sponsored sixteen tournaments. Through the Board's efficient operation the percentage of students taking part in intramural activities has been increased from the sixty per cent of last year to about eighty-five per cent. This figure is for the Lake Shore Campus only however, for the downtown University College does not participate. The Medical and Dental Schools proved active enough however, and maintained an extensive and spirited sports program. The schedule on the Lake Shore Campus divides the competition into the Freshman and Senior Divisions. It also provides for a Sweepstake to determine the all around champions of the campus. In line with this Sweepstake, a carefully tabulated system of team and individual points is maintained. Each man with a high individual score is awarded a gold, silver, or bronze medal at the end of the I-M season according to the number of points garnered. Each member of the team winning the Sweepstake receives a gold medal, and the team name is put on the I-M banner in the Lounge.

The I-M season opened with the golf tournament. Here the Dodgers first revealed their power, making a clean sweep. Jim Lindsay's eighty-two was good enough to cop a first, but Dodgers Koerner and Waldron were close on his divot marks with eighty-three and eighty-four respectively.

The failure of so many of the freshman teams to show up for their games almost resulted in the disbandment of the frosh touchball division. Three teams infused life into the circuit however, and advanced to the round robin playoff. These were the Hoplites, the freshman Greek students, and the Aces and Deuces, former Academy men. A surprisingly well developed Phi Mu unit swept through the playoff to take first place, while the Delts took second, and the Aces and Hoplites tied for third. The Phi Mu success was due principally to their passing wonder, Johnnie Dymek.

The Delts and Pi Alphas took joint possession of the swimming championship, the Phi Mus taking third, and the Hoplites fourth. The individual stars deserving of mention were Bus Moore, the Nesbitt twins, Tom Burns, Carroll, Lynch, and Dixon.

After their failure to count in the water, the Dodgers scored an easy win on the cinders in the Fall Relays. A short time later, Dodger Vinny Graham won the Turkey Run, setting a new record, but the Delts won with more places.

In the Channel Swim, the finishing order was Delts, Dodgers, and Pi Alphas, and the individual winners were Moore, Ed Nesbitt, and Ross Littig.

This year's basketball tourney featured keen competition in both senior and freshman divisions. The senior circuit championship went to the Dodgers after a season-long battle that culminated in a final meleé that the Dodgers won from the Alpha Delts by a slim margin. The Ozarks scored a surprise victory in the freshman loop, but lost to the senior champs. The night of the I-M Carnival, the Dodgers crushed the Hoplités from the Med School, 36-16, for the all-university championship.

The same night, pool and boxing championships were decided. In the pool tournament, Kuni reached the finals for the third consecutive year, but lost this year to Art Zech who came through to win, 100-78, after a brilliant rally. The turnout for boxing this year was the heaviest in the history of the tournament. Keen interest was shown by the student body in all the fights. At the time of this writing, the tourney is not completed, but the titles already decided went to George Kiely, Tim Dillon, and Jack Larsen.

In the ping-pong finals, Beresky whipped Lask to take the trophy awarded this year. Sam Marotta rolled 512 to beat Markiewicz, Med School champ, in the bowling tourney.

The tennis tournament, begun early in the school year, had to be postponed until spring by reason of inclement weather, and the handball tournament was put off indefinitely until arrangements could be made for its completion.

Credit for the efficient and active intramural program this year goes to senior manager Jack Driscoll and his staff. Junior managers, Marty O'Shaughnessy and Bill Gibbons bore most of the load for Driscoll, and it was through their efforts that the I-M Carnival was so successful this year. The rest of the staff on the Lake Shore Campus was comprised of sophomore managers Bruce Berens, Bill Garner, Bernie Kiley, and Bob Schiavone; freshman managers Jim Byrne, Dan Conroyd, Ted Cornell, Ross Littig, and Bill Sheahan. Lyle Russell of the Med school, and Max Shapiro and Howard Gault of the Dent school made up the rest of the board. The entire program was under the supervision of Moderator Alex Wilson.

BOARD OF PUBLICATIONS

The Board of Publications, the guiding hand of all university literary activities, is composed of the Reverend Eugene Shiels, S.J., Dr. Morton D. Zabel, Mr. Mark E. Guerin, Mr. Julius Kuhinka, and Mr. James J. Young.

It is the duty of this board to supervise the three student publications, the LOYOLAN, the QUARTERLY, and the NEWS. Dr. Zabel, the chairman of the board, serves as Moderator of the LOYOLAN and also of the QUARTERLY. Mr. Guerin is the moderator of the Loyola NEWS.

One of the accomplishments of the Board of Publications was the bringing of the Jesuit College Newspaper Association convention to Chicago at Loyola. This convention was held on the 8th, 9th, and 10th of December and marked the high point of the journalistic year. Present at this convention were representatives of Holy Cross, Spring Hill, Loyola of the South, Regis, Rockhurst, John Carroll, Detroit, Marquette, St. Louis, Creighton, and Xavier, all Jesuit colleges and universities.

Heading the list of speakers at this meeting were Dr. Harry M. Gage, president of Coe College, Dr. Edward A. Fitzpatrick, president of Mount Mary

DR. MORTON D. ZABEL, chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Publications and moderator of the LOYOLAN and the LOYOLA QUARTERLY.

Mr. MARK GUERIN, member of the Faculty Committee on Student Publications and moderator of the LOYOLA NEWS.

College, Dean John C. Fitzgerald of the Loyola Law School, and the Reverend William J. McGucken, S.J., prefect of studies in the Missouri province of the Society of Jesus. These speakers stressed particularly the Catholic heritage of culture, democracy and the Catholic college, the place of the Jesuit College Publication in the student world, and the combating of subversive propaganda. The convention closed with the establishment of the J. C. N. A. press service, the purpose of which is to effect closer coordination of Jesuit College newspapers.

THE BANQUET of the Jesuit Colleges Newspaper Association was held this year at Loyola. This convention was climaxed by the election of Norbert Hruby to the position of president of the organization.

THE LOYOLAN

CHARLIE O'LAUGHLIN (above) as Editor, was responsible for the planning, the style, and the contents of the '39 LOYOLAN. He supervised indirectly the work of all the editors, made all contracts, and contacted the schools and faculty. It is due to him that the book is in its present form.

ment was not forthcoming and the staff was again forced to rely on what was owned by the students themselves. However, Rog Slattery in his position as managing editor took personal supervision of the photography. With his extensive experience gained last year, Rog has gotten photographs that will take many years to duplicate. The amount of time and effort required to take pictures is enormous. From the fact that a single picture may take hours, carrying the photographer to all ends of the city, one can see that the total volume of work required, when you consider that there are over 500 staff pictures appearing in the Putting out a year-book is a year's job. Plans for the 1939 LOYOLAN were begun last June and it is the sincere hope of the staff that the book will be in the hands of the students by June. In other schools the plans may be laid, the contracts may be signed, or the layouts designed by faculty members or a committee, but the LOYOLAN is strictly a product of the student body.

The pictures for the LOYOLAN this year are the finest of any that have ever been taken. Great pressure was exerted to obtain photographic equipment worthy of the demands of the staff, but such equip-

LOYOLAN this year. We point to the nursing school section as an example of the work done by Slattery.

In charge of the copy was Charles Nesbitt, who served his fourth year on the staff. It was his duty to see that all copy was written in presentable style. This required some prodding in order to secure the stories originally, and a great deal of effort in rewriting these stories so as to brush them up in final form. Also the group pictures of the classes of the various schools of the university were in Charlie's hands, no small task by itself.

Chief assistant to the editor and general handy-

ROG SLATTERY (above right) combined jobs this year being both managing editor and photographer. The lack of grey hairs in the editor's head testify to his ability in the former position, and the pictures in this book are a tribute to his success in the latter.

CHARLEY NESBITT (left) is happy as his job is completed. As copy editor he had the task of editing and checking all the copy in the book within a two months period.

EDWARD CROWLEY (extreme right) our medical school representative, provided the staff with fast accurate service in regard to all copy and pictures dealing with the school. He has the longest record of service on the annual having been on the staff for seven years.

THE BUSINESS MANAGER (above) Gene Dubay, has had the tough assignment of gathering his material from widely diversified sources for those sections that he was responsible for of the business end of the publication.

BILL SMURDON (below) has contacted the heads of each fraternity more than ten times apiece in order to obtain all the details for the fraternity section.

PAUL HUMMERT, the club editor, fakes a phone call to the head of the International Circle. But seriously Paul did make a lot of phone calls in collecting his pictures and copy,—to complete his section.

THE ATHLETIC EDITOR, Warren Matt, and the senior editor, Jim Conway, hold a discussion on the aesthetic principle in yearbooks. These men have contributed their work toward the completion of two of the most important sections of the book.

THE CONCLAVE OF THE PHOTOGRAPHERS, Landgren, Derby and Martin contributed no end of pictures to the pictorial effect of this book.

HAROLD FREY AND RAY KENNEDY here ponder some dubious point in the copy. Both of these men did a little of everything around the office, taking hand at writing, captioning pictures, writing letters, and assisting the editor in various other ways.

Paul found it his job to write much of the copy and to arrange dates for pictures for these organizations, and despite the pressure of other duties, fulfilled the assignment with much credit.

Not to be forgotten are the younger men on the staff, who contributed so much to the success of the book. Ed Martin and Ed Landgren, our neophyte photographers, and Frank Derby, our downtown photographer spent many hours fulfilling the assignments that fell on their shoulders, and the experience they gained this year argues well for the success of future years. Jack O'Connor aided greatly in writing sports copy, and Ray Kennedy was of great value lending his talents wherever directed. Our representatives, Ed Crowley of the Medical School, who has completed the remarkable record of seven years' service on the LOYOLAN, Jim O'Brien of the Law School, Torrence Hecht, S.J., of West Baden, and John Gannon of the University College saw to it that their division of the University was properly represented.

Great credit must be given also to John Walch for the originality and sophistication which his art work has lent to this year's LOYOLAN.

The staff has labored long and hard in the production of the 1939 LOYOLAN, and has left no stone unturned to make it the best yet.

JOHN WALCH is the man responsible for those clever, little incidental drawings which adorn the pages.

THE LOYOLA NEWS

NORB HRUBY (left) was editor of the News during the first semester of the school year. The editions that he has put out have been notable for their originality and constructive spirit.

TOM SHIELDS (right) is past-editor of the news, holding office during the second semester of last year. He was managing editor this year, and as such, has been completely efficient and dependable.

In an editorial contained in the first issue of the LOYOLA NEWS for the 1938-1939 academic year it was stated that the policy of the NEWS was to be "a positive platform aimed to make the student body more acutely aware of itself in its virtues and its possible shortcomings." Further, it was to be "a positive program for the improvement of the student body religiously, intellectually, culturally, socially, and athletically." Finally, wrote the editor, "to the unification of the interests of the schools of Loyola University, the NEWS editorial staff dedicates itself for the coming year."

With these stated aims before it, the staff of the LOYOLA NEWS under the leadership of Norbert Hruby, Arts senior and editor-in-chief, began the business of putting out a presentable collegiate news publication comparable to the issues of former regimes. For the first time in recent years the NEWS was not content merely to report and to comment on the activities of the University, but also to make some of that news itself. A war participation poll was conducted on the Arts campus at the time of the Munich crisis; the first annual Loyola University short story competition was sponsored by the NEWS; the Jesuit College Newspaper Association was reorganized directly through the work of NEWS men and the NEWS moderator, Mr. Mark E. Guerin.

NEWS EDITOR DAN MURPHY drops a few sage words of advice to reporters Bud Knoll, and Dick Boland on what makes news. The news section is one of the most important parts of the paper, and as such it requires capable handling.

Of invaluable assistance to Hruby during his regime was Thomas Shields, editor-in-chief during the second semester last year. His tireless and understanding cooperation in his role of managing editor materially relieved the editor of many of the customary worries. In Richard Garvey, Hruby was blessed with a scholarly, yet interesting feature writer. John Walsh and John Dwyer made the lot of the editor an easier one. The four outstanding juniors on the staff, William Gibbons, Arthur Kogstad, Martin O'Shaughnessy, and Daniel Murphy left little to be desired in their respective departments; Gibbons succeeded O'Shaughnessy as the sports editor midway in the first semester. Kogstad copy editor, combined his with Jim Cutler's metaphorical wit to present a happy alloy to the readers of "Ho-Hum." John Lyons' "Skimming the Cream" illustrated the high degree of excellence to which a collegiate drama critic can raise his art. Dan Murphy's skillful and unquestionably fair treatment of fraternity news on the fraternity page more than justified the wisdom of his appointment to the post. The off-campus representatives of the NEWS, those vitally important in making the NEWS an all-University activity, were extraordinarily faithful in the performance of their duties; their names, John Condon, Edmund Sinnott, Charles Strubbe, Martin Svaglic, Max Shapiro, Alice Kies, and John Gannon.

JOHN DEVANEY, who now holds the position of news editor evidently likes his own stories.

GARVEY AND DWYER as rewrite men and members of the editorial board took care to see that the literary quality of the paper was on a consistently high level.

JOHNNY WALCH, associate editor makes a suggestion to the assistant news editor, Bob Graham. These two men have also contributed their time and talents to maintain the newspaper's high level of interest.

William Gibbons succeeded Hruby as editor in February, and Arthur Kogstad followed Thomas Shields as managing editor. Gibbons appointed the following staff for his tenure which is to last until February, 1940; executive editors, O'Shaughnessy and Murphy; news editor, John Devaney; business manager, Richard Boland; sports editor, Robert Wallace; fraternity editor, Frank Knoll; copy editor, James Cutler; circulation manager, Timothy Dillon.

Gibbons is the first editor of the NEWS for a full year since the regime of Frank Hausmann in 1935-1936. In a few month's time he has already displayed remarkable editorial capabilities.

THE LOYOLA

EDITOR OF THE QUARTERLY is John Lyons, one of the most outstanding writers and students of English in the University. Through his efforts the quality of the publication has been kept on a consistently high level.

The LOYOLA QUARTERLY, now in its 36th year, is the literary publication of the University, and as such, provides an opportunity to the student body and the faculty for the expression of their ideas and the cultivation of literary talent. During its life it has built a reputation for quality and intellectual maturity, and this year the editors, John Lyons, Arts junior, editor-in-chief, and John Walch, Arts senior, managing editor, have kept up the traditionally high standards of the magazine. In addition they have tried to broaden the field of interest and to present material of a lighter nature than that which had it carried in the years immediately previous.

This year's QUARTERLY was an interesting and stimulating magazine of which any college might well be proud. Each issue carried one article by a faculty member, and numerous short stories and poems appeared. Several new writers of exceptional talent were presented to the student body, including Robert Welter Daly, Earle R. Steinmetz, and Leo Parenti of the University College, and Francis Goessling, Harold J. Frey, and Thomas Fenlon of the College of Arts and Sciences.

One of the unusual features of this year's QUARTERLY was the Short Story contest which was sponsored by the LOYOLA NEWS. The Winter issue carried the two prize winning stories, "Vae Victis", by Robert Daly, and "Ten Years From Now", by John Walch. Both stories were of outstanding quality, and plans have been made to conduct the short story contest as a yearly feature of both the QUARTERLY and the NEWS.

Another interesting feature this year was the revival of the Coffee House, a department for lighter material, which had been popular in the QUARTERLY a number of years ago, but which had beendropped. This department featured personal essays, parodies, poetry, and articles of a less serious nature than those in the body of the magazine.

THESE MEN OF THE STAFF have contributed their time and talents to make the Quarterly a success. Norbert Hruby, Arthur Kogstad, James Cutler, and Richard Garvey have been responsible for many of the contributions appearing in this year's issues.

QUARTERLY

Poetry, too, had a revival this year, highlighted by two long poems, "Tragedy in Rhythm", by Norbert Hruby, Arts senior, a study of the mechanistic evils of our age which appeared in the Winter issue, and "Cassandra", by John Lyons, which appeared in the Spring issue. Numerous shorter poems by Thomas Fenlon, James Cutler, Leo Parenti, and others appeared during the course of the year. In line with the editors' policy of presenting the creative work of the students, this renaissance of the poetic spirit among Loyola writers was most significant.

Another change was that of the "Editor's Foreword", which took the place of the "Contributor's Page." The old page carried the names of the individual contributors and an enumeration of their distinctions, memberships in clubs, etc. to further identify them. The new page, written by John Lyons, is a synopsis of the issue—mention of the articles and brief comment upon them.

Each issue carried articles on topics of interest to the student body. Arthur Kogstad, Arts junior, published a series of illuminating on radio in education, and Louis C. Baldwin contributed several articles on topics ranging from the European crisis of last January to the value of modern advertising. Richard Garvey, Arts senior, in several articles commented penetratingly on the problems that confront the young college student of to-day, from the problem of the next war to a discussion of the place of college education in democratic America today.

The Art and Music section, under the direction of John Walch carried a number of interesting discussions, notably those of Mr. Walch himself and of Earle Steinmetz. The Book Shelf under the direction of James Cutler kept the student body abreast of the latest developments on the literary scene.

MANAGING EDITOR, John Walch is one of the most versatile members of the staff. Equally at home in the fields of the short story, literary and musical criticism, art work, and poetry, he has helped keep up the publication to its high standards.

ARTHUR KOGSTAD (below) has been a very prolific contributor to the Quarterly for several years. This year he wrote a series of articles dealing with the role of radio in education which have been extremely interesting and informative.

RICHARD GARVEY (left) has contributed many timely and interesting articles on the problems of the American college student. His informal and charming essays have been one of the features of the "Coffee House" section.

SODALITY OF

EDWARD MARCINIAK, President of the Lake Shore Sodality.

In the activities of the true Catholic, religion will play the most important role. In the Catholic college and university, the function of the Sodality of Our Lady is to make religion play the primary part in the life of every student and to provide the world with leaders once college days are over. With this end in mind, Mr. John A. Kemp, S.J. took over the direction of the sodality. To Edward A. Marciniak, president of Cisca went the office of president. Harry Homan succeeded to the office of vice-president, and John Felten became secretary.

The work of the Eucharistic Committee was entrusted to Frank Knoll. The Friday morning mass, the retreat, the daily devotions to the Blessed Virgin Mary during the month of May, the practice of more frequent visits to the chapel were all part of the program of the Eucharistic Committee.

John Dwyer was in charge of the Social Action Committee. Under his leadership, the Sodality sponsored a series of inter-class football games for the Thanksgiving basket funds, proceeds of which went to provide baskets for families in some of the poorer parishes of Chicago. Later in the year, the Social Action Committee issued a series of leaflets on the "Living Wage" and other correlated subjects.

To Paul Hummert was given the chairmanship of the Apostolic Committee. An old clothes drive was held which brought hundreds of pounds of clothing for the Indian Missions. Under the direction of Mr. Ernest V. McClear, S.J. the Apostolic Committee worked to aid the missions in Patna, Indiana and many of the poorer parishes in Chicago by the sale of Christmas seals.

The chairmanship of the Literature Committee was entrusted to Thomas Shields. The work of providing speakers for assemblies and sodality meetings was done by this committee. Through the sodality pamphlet rack, students were furnished with the best in the way of pamphlets and magazines at cost. The best in contemporary Catholic thought was thus put into the reach of every student. In this work, Shields was assisted by Joseph McNeela. The committee cooperated with Cisca in putting out weekly bulletins and the Cisca page in the NEW WORLD.

The climax of the Sodality's activity was climaxed on February 26th when the Loyola sodality was host to hundreds of college students and alumni of Chicago's colleges in the third of Cisca's college forums. With Edward Marciniak as chairman, Thomas Shields, John Felten, and William Bryar presented papers and led a discussion on the topic "We Face the World." The entertainment committee for this affair was headed by Thomas Burns and Charles Jasiel.

The Della Strada Sodality is a group of Catholic women attending the University College division of the University. These women have banded themselves together into a sodality, under the moderatorship of the Reverend Thomas A. Egan, S.J. They hold a yearly retreat in which all members participate. Under the presidency of Delphine Healey they hold several benefit parties for the underprivileged children of several Catholic parishes in Chicago. They hold weekly group meetings and discussions and arrange for occasional Catholic guestspeakers.

The Sodality of West Baden College is a training camp for future Sodality leaders and moderators. It drills the Jesuit Scholastic in manipulating the mechanism and technique of Sodality organizations so that he in turn may lead high school and college men and women to the imitation of Christ through a devotion to Mary.

This year the Sodality has been composed of five committees which met every Monday evening. The Socio-economic committee, under the direction of Mr. John P. Dolan, S.J., studied the Corporative states, Cooperatives and Communism. The Literature Guild, directed by Mr. Edmund J. Montville, S.J., made an intensive study of Catholic drama. Mr. Ignatius W. Collins, S.J. coached the Fourth Estate in a critical analysis of propaganda: communistic, fascistic, and Spanish. The Evidence Guild, with Mr. Anthony J. Peterman, S.J. as chairman, studied the methods of street-preaching, the popular exposition of Catholic dogma, and the effective refutation of anti-Catholic bias. Finally, Mr. John J. McKechney, S.J. was the leader of the Mission Committee which studied the life, problems and progress of home and foreign missionaries.

The most noteworthy contribution of the West Baden College to the progress of Sodality work is the development of the "general meeting." Each committee undertakes one such "general meeting" during the year. Its purpose is to acquaint the entire Sodality with the work of each committee, to unify the efforts of the individual committees and to add variety to the year's program.

Besides the regular weekly and the "general meetings" spiritual academies in honor of the Blessed Virgin were held on a few of Our Lady's feast days. The reading of a paper about the Blessed Virgin, the recitation of the Rosary, and the singing of hymns constituted the program.

Seen thus in its various aspects on the different campuses of Loyola University, the remarkable unity and cohesion running through the Sodality organization is at once apparent. The measure of the success of the Sodality is in the intensity of Catholic life as manifested on the campus and later. That is the ultimate criteria.

LOYOLA MUSICIANS

The musical organizations at Loyola University have a three fold aim. They are designed to provide a cultural phase to education, to cultivate the students' tastes, and to develop their abilities upon musical lines. As a natural concomitant of this purpose these groups present to both the student body and to other selected groups the results of their endeavors.

The musical groups of the university are the Lake Shore Campus Glee Club, the University College Women's Choir, and the orchestra. Upon occasion, the Glee Club and the Women's Choir unite to form the Choral Society. Both vocal groups are under the direction of Mr. Graciano Salvador, assistant professor of modern languages, while Mario Salvador, Arts Junior, directs the orchestra.

The organizations have maintained three of their traditional services to the school. This group has sung at the student High Masses, has led the school songs at student assemblies, and has contributed their services upon special occasions. They have entertained this year at the Honors Convocation, at the Mothers' Club Card parties and at other gatherings.

As an added feature this year, the Choral Society has contributed their services to various Catholic Churches throughout the city. On the fourth Sunday of Lent, it sang at Holy Family and at St. Andrew's Churches. Later on during Lent, it accompanied the services at Notre Dame Church.

ORCHESTRA . . . CHOIR

MARIO SALVADOR, organist extraordinary, has had the difficult task this year of directing the orchestra. Widely known as a musician, he gives to the members the benefits of his experience.

THE CHOIR sings the Kyrie at the student Mass, as Murphy and Grey blend their voices in this beautiful melody.

Some of the outstanding singers in this year's organization are Walter Kawula, Claytus Nelson, Bob Graham, and Francis McCall.

The eighteen-piece orchestra of the University is a capable group of musicians. They have not as yet given any recitals to display their ability, but their reputation is such that the student body are certain that the entertainment they contribute will be of the highest quality. This quality may be judged from the fact that many of the members are of professional status.

Charles Jasiel and his trombone have completed four years of service with the Loyola orchestra. He has been one of the mainstays and dependable members of this organization. Harold Weinstein, a freshman this year, has demonstrated his versatility on both the clarinet and the saxophone. In string music, the orchestra has exceptional talent in Frank Oliver, Bruno Krzeminski, and John Pieronozzi.

during the course of the year. Peter Conway has been succeeded by Claytus Nelson as President; Bob Reilly has also resigned as secretary, while Edgar Zelsman, Walter Kawula, and Norbert Essig have been elected vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively. These new officers are planning to resume the program formerly offered by the Glee Club, and intend to sponsor several popular concerts before the completion of this year.

Their singing at the student Masses during the year has been a means of carrying on one of the most inspiring and elevating traditions at Loyola. They have made the student body more cognizant of the beauty and power of music and of the solemnity and devotion of the Mass. This one thing alone would serve as a raison d'être for their existence.

A vote of thanks is due Mr. Graciano Salvador for his capable and artistic direction of the musical organizations during the past year. He has kept the tradition of good music alive at Loyola.

"FOLLOW ME" says tenor Claytus Nelson, and each singer does. Each public performance requires many hours of such long and careful practice.

THE CURTAIN

AS DIRECTOR of the Curtain Guild, Mr. Bertram Walker is in charge of producing the yearly plays. This year he has been capably assisted by Charles Nesbitt, president of the Curtain Guild, and manager of the production staff.

Dramatic productions at Loyola are in the hands of the Curtain Guild, an organization composed of students interested in the theater. The director of the guild is Mr. Bert G. Walker; the Reverend James V. Kelly, S.J., Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, is the faculty moderator. Ordinarily the Curtain Guild stages two full-length plays annually before the students and their friends.

This year, however, was exceptional in that the Curtain Guild was able to give only one play. On April 14 it presented Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here" to a capacity house of over 900 people in the Loyola Community Theater. The play was staged and directed by Mr. Walker.

The cast for the play was headed by Paul Sylvester, Arts senior and Curtain Guild veteran, who took the role of Doremus Jessup, the newspaper editor. His daughter, Mary, was played by Agnes Marie Stroth of the University College. Rosemary Brandstrader, also of the University College, filled the role of Lorinda Pike, spinster society editor of Jessup's paper. Particularly noteworthy was the job of acting was done by James Marzano, Arts sophomore and newcomer to the Curtain Guild, in the role of Shad Ledue, henchman of the dictatorship party. Charles Flynn, Arts sophomore, gave an exceptional performance as Effingham Swan, local commissioner for the dictator. The part of Julian Flzck, disappointed college graduate, was handled by John Devaney, Arts junior.

Others in the cast were Gordon Murphy, Arts Freshman, and Betty Stroth of the University College as Mr. and Mrs. Veeder; Orrin Wheeler, Arts Freshman; Ray Kennedy, Arts Freshmen, JACK MURNIGHAN, PAUL SYLVESTER, AND GERARD GALANTE take a few minutes off before preparing themselves for going on stage.

REHEARSAL, as demonstrated by Orrin Wheeler, Ray Kennedy, Betty Stroth, and Gordon Murphy, must be held for many weeks before the play is ready to be produced.

GUILD

as Nickerson; Charles Sossong, Arts Junior, as Fowler Greenhill; Gerard Galante, Arts sophomore, as Tasbrough; Edward Nesbitt, Arts senior, as Dan Wilgus; Jack Clifford, Arts Freshman, as Dimmick; and Norbert Essig and Greg White, Arts Freshman and Sophomore, as corpo officers. Smallest actor in the play, and certainly one of the best, was Jackie Haligan, sixth grade student in St. Ignatius school, who gave a remarkable performance in the role of Davy, ten year old grandson of Jessup.

Heading the production staff for the play was Charles Nesbitt, Arts Senior and president of the Guild. Tickets and business were entrusted to William Gibbons, Arts Junior and business manager. Assisting Gibbons were Roger Sayre, Arts Junior, and Bob Bremer and Mike Esposito, Arts Sophomores. No small share of the details was handled by Rosemary Brandstrader in her office of secretary-treasurer. The stage work was in charge of Roger Slattery, Arts Senior. Others on the stage crew were Charles Schaeffer, Paul Hummert, Jack Mohr, Jack Murnighan, and Bob Esser. Thomas Burns, Arts Senior and vice-president, was chairman of the play-selection committee.

THE SAYING "It's hard Lines" was certainly not originated by this happy group of actors. Charles Flynn, Charles Sossong, Agnes Marie Stroth, and Paul Sylvester find memorizing their lines an almost agreeable task.

"HOW DOES IT SOUND TO THE AUDIENCE?" is the question this group of the cast is trying to answer. Gordon Murphy, Agnes Marie Stroth, Betty Stroth, Paul Sylvester, Rosemary Brandstrader, and Charles Nesbitt watch their fellow actors perform.

BACKSTAGE DIRECTIONS are laid down by Rog Slattery, as Charles Nesbitt keeps pace with the technicalities of lighting and properties as shown in the script. The technical details are tremendously important to the success of any production.

JOHN WALCH AND ART KOGSTAD pay close attention to their opponent's arguments in order to prepare successful rebuttals.

MR. FRED L. BRANDSTRADER, moderator of the Varsity Debating Squad.

This year the Varsity Debating Team has enjoyed a very successful season under the capable direction of Mr. Fred L. Brandstrader, the moderator of this organization. This activity has considerable popularity among the upper classmen since it provides unusually good training in public speaking and extempore thinking. This year the society debated the timely question—"Resolved: that the United States should cease to use public funds for the stimulation of business." The opportunities and ramifications surrounding this question are obviously numerous, and as such, it provided an excellent topic for debate.

Beginning in early November, the society engaged in a number of intercollegiate debates with the various colleges in and about Chicago. All this was, however, only preparation for the regular debate season that began after the Christmas holidays. At this time the varsity squad began to compete in the regular college debate cycle.

After the semester examinations, teams from representative colleges and universities of the United States visited Loyola and met members of the club in debates before the student body. Four states were represented in this section of the debating season. Ohio sent a debate squad from Xavier University; Michigan had Western State Teachers College; Iowa was represented by St. Ambrose College, and Texas by Anderson College.

During February, the squad sent two teams to the St. Thomas Tournament in St. Paul, where both teams made good records. Although they were both eliminated in the semi-finals they had already avenged themselves upon St. Thomas, who had beaten them earlier in the season.

At this regional Pi Kappa Delta tournament, Loyola met and defeated some of the best teams in the northwest before being themselves eliminated. It is noteworthy that all the judges who witnessed the Loyola debaters in action remarked upon the quality of their debating.

While these men were in the northwest, the men at Loyola met the team from Niagara College of New York State and split a dual decision. At the same time, Loyola vanquished a squad from the southern college, William and Mary.

Early in March, the debaters met the visitors from Gonzaga of Spokane, Washington, representing the Pacific northwest, and won a decision from them. They again defeated the team from the University of Dayton. Loyola also held a no-decision debate with the University of Detroit, and a round table discussion with Erskine College.

After the Easter week end, the team sent two men on a tour of the eastern states, meeting such schools as Marquette, Mount Saint Mary's, Detroit, John Carroll, Xavier, University of Akron, Dayton, and St. Louis, this last being a radio debate.

DEBATE

PETER CONWAY, President of the Varsity Debating Team.

In addition to the regular program, the debaters gave a number of exhibition debates before such audiences as the Knights of Columbus, the various Holy Name Societies, and the South Side Catholic Women's Club. Each exhibition brought requests for return debates and new audiences. As a result these debates were continued until the end of the school year.

The regular debate season ended with a second round of debates with the schools in Chicagoland, namely, Mundelein, DePaul, Rosary, Chicago, Northwestern and John Marshall Law School.

This year has seen a return to a high quality of debating. Under the leadership of Peter Conway, John Naghten Debate Winner in 1938, the team has had a highly successful season, winning a large percentage of their scheduled debates. With other members on the squad such as Ed Marciniak, Tom Burns, Richard Garvey, and Tom Shields, as senior members, it can be easily seen why such a record was hung up.

A large amount of credit must be given to the junior members of the squad who in their first year of varsity debating have shown such promise and capability. They are to be highly commended for their interest and enthusiasm in this activity.

A new feature in varsity debating this year was the announcement by Mr. Brandstrader that those sophomore members of the Cudahy Forum who show considerable ability would be put on the varsity debate squad in order to give them collegiate competition and make them more experienced debaters in their succeeding two years. Consequently, about six sophomores have performed faithfully in some of the home debates gaining both experience for themselves and victories for the team.

Great credit must be given to Mr. Brandstrader for his capable coaching and handling of this year's team. A debater of considerable experience himself, he has turned out a squad of men who are able to hold their own with almost any school in the country. The record of the past season demonstrates the truth of this seemingly broad statement. It will not detract from the credit that these men on the team are entitled to, if Mr. Brandstrader is allotted his full share of responsibility in the team's record.

By being also moderator of the Cudahy Forum, he is able to keep a close watch on good debating material, and to promote them to varsity debating as soon as their talents mature. This close consolidation of the two squads bodes well for the future of debating at Loyola.

LISTENING TO THE OPPOSITION and gathering material for a rebuttal engrosses the attention of Tom Burns, while John Walsh thinks of an appropriate method of stating his next point.

MARTY O'SHAUGHNESSY delivers a scathing rebuttal, without, however, seemingly disconcerting his opponents.

THE CUDAHY FORUM

The Cudahy Forum is the junior debating society of Loyola. Its function is to train freshmen and sophomores of the Lake Shore Campus for future varsity competition.

This year, the moderator, Mr. Fred Brandstrader, instructor in speech, and the chairman, Francis McGarr, Arts Freshman and Harrison Oratorical Contest winner, led the group through a particularly full and successful season. The question debated was the collegiate debate question of the year, "Resolved: The United States should cease using public funds for the stimulation of business."

The Forum's greatest achievement was the record they established at the Manchester tournament in Huntington, Indiana. In the senior division, in which in previous years Loyola was represented by varsity debaters, an affirmative team composed of McGarr and Hayden won five and lost one, and Robert Shanahan and William Ryan, defending the negative, made a record of three and three. In the junior division, the affirmative team of William Bryar and Edward Riordan won three while losing two, and the negative team of Daniel Diekow and Charles Ewerts won two out of four.

The Forum this year began the practice of giving exhibition debates before Chicago high schools and parishes. Debates were given at Notre Dame High School, St. Joseph's and Anne's parish, and St. Ferdinand's parish. McGarr and Hayden journeyed to Milwaukee to debate the junior debating society of Marquette University. In the Chicago tournament held at Northwestern University, the Forum entered two teams composed of McGarr and Hayden, and Ryan and Edward Corboy.

MR. FRED L. BRANDSTRADER
Moderator of the Cudahy Forum.

TIMOTHY DILLON, President of the Cudahy Forum.

First row: Hayden, Guskay, Dillon, Mr. Brandstrader, McGarr, Clifford, Shanahan.

Second row: Ryan, Riordan, Bachavz, Galante, Worchol, Doyle.

Rear row: Ewerts, Bryar, Donohue, Smurdou, Schlottman, Fox.

SPEECH WINNERS

FRANK MCGARR, winner of the Harrison Oratorical Contest, receives the congratulations of Mr. Garrett Richard, judge of the speeches.

WILLIAM RYAN, wins the debating award founded by John Naghten. Mr. Waldron, one of the judges of the debate, extends his congratulations.

The Harrison Oratorical Contest has been a tradition at Loyola since 1901 when it was established by the Honorable Carter H. Harrison, then mayor of Chicago. The winner is given a gold key and is declared the official orator of the Lake Shore Campus student body.

This year an Arts Freshman, Francis McGarr, won the contest. The general topic was, "What is Wrong with the Modern World?" Other finalists were Gerard Galante, Edward Marciniak, Charles Nesbitt, and James Orphan.

The contest was judged by Mr. Garret Richard, M.A., superintendent of Lafayette High School. The speakers were judged on choice of topic, selection and organization of material, oratorical style, adaptation of subjection to audience, expression, voice, and diction.

A great deal of earlier experience both forensic and dramatic compensated for any disadvantage McGarr may have had because of his youth. At St. Ignatius High School, he was a member of the debating society, winner of the elocution contest and winner of the symposium on St. Thomas Aquinas. At present he is manager of the Cudahy Forum. The particular subject of McGarr's speech was "Government by the People."

Each contestant was obliged to submit his speech before the preliminary round to Mr. James J. Young, assistant professor of English, and chairman of the contest. A careful method of selection was used to insure that the speeches be worthy of the high calibre of previous years' competition.

The Loyola debaters annually participate in the John Naghten Debate; this competition was begun thirty-eight years ago to stimulate interest in debating, and to determine the forensic champion of the University.

This year's event was won by William Ryan, Arts Freshman and member of the Cudahy Forum. In second place, one point behind the winner, was Frank McGarr, another Arts Freshman and member of the Cudahy Forum, and winner of the Harrison Oratorical Contest. Edward Corboy, Arts Sophomore, merited third place, while Carl Hayden placed fourth.

The decision was rendered by three members of the faculty of the Law School, Mr. John Waldron, Mr. James Howell, and Mr. John Hayes. In choosing the winning team, they unanimously gave the decision to the negative, composed of Ryan and Corboy. The question was, "Resolved: That the United States cease using public funds for the stimulation of business." Mr. Waldron, who reported the decision, participated in the competition eleven years ago. The main considerations in determining the winners were eloquence of delivery and ability to answer arguments in the rebuttals.

Mr. Fred L. Brandstrader, instructor in speech and director of debating, was chairman of this event. The preliminary round is open to all students. The contestants choose their own side of the question and the chairman selects the four best speakers. The toss of a coin decides which side each of the four will take in the finals.

A C K N O W L E D G M E N T

This being the last copy to be written for the Loyolan, being written in the offices of the Rogers Printing Company in Dixon, Illinois, the great task of compiling the 1939 Loyolan is at last done.

This has been a great year at Loyola. Our Basketball team was the finest ever to represent Loyola; our track team is achieving heights hitherto unknown to Loyola track teams; our swimming team, in its first season as a major sport has had an enviable record; student government has had much greater prestige and influence than in previous years; for the first time a Loyola University Student has won the intercollegiate Latin contest; the student body has awakened to the value of the Loyola News as an organ of student opinion. It is our hope that the LOYOLAN has given adequate interpretation to these and, if possible, be placed in their ranks itself.

Looking back, we find ourself indebted to many people for their fine service. The staff itself has given unsparingly of its time and effort to fulfill the countless tasks placed upon it.

Of our professional assistants, nothing but the best can be said.

Root Studios, despite the death of its director, gave service that is equalled only by the work that they have done in the past. John Roach with his camera has become a familiar sight around Loyola functions, and it is an unusual student that has not come in contact with him at least once during the year.

Pontiac Engraving and Electrotpe Company, represented by Mr. Fred Montiegel, formerly publicity director to Loyola, has again earned the eternal thanks of the staff for its service and quality of product. It is the job of the engravers to start the wheels in motion in the formation of a new yearbook, and by assisting and guiding the editor in all his choices, Fred Montiegel has proved the proverbial rock of Gibraltar on which to lean.

This year has seen the return of the Rogers Printing Company as the printers of the LOYOLAN. Firmly established as a yearbook printer, excelled by none, after a lapse of 12 years, Rogers Printing Company has assumed the responsibility of printing the LOYOLAN. Represented by Mr. Oliver D. Rogers, the firm has given to the LOYOLAN the wealth of experience and ability that is theirs.

The covers have been made by the S. K. Smith Co., manufacturers of LOYOLAN Covers for many years, and long acknowledged the leader in the cover field.

To these and the countless others that have aided so much in the production of the 1939 LOYOLAN, a large debt of gratitude is owed, and it is the sincere wish of the editor that they may continue their fine service for many years.

C. J. O'L.
